Kissinger calls it quits; mission fails

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger broke off Saturday night his whirlwind shuttle efforts to win a Middle East peace because of "irreconcilable" differences between Egypt and Israel.

Kissinger had held two sessions with Israeli negotiators before calling it quits after 16 days of intense negotiations.

State Department spokesman Robert Anderson told a news conference that Kissinger would return to Washington. Other U.S officials said he planned to leave the Mideast his morning.

Anderson made the brief announcement after last-ditch efforts by Kissinger to bridge the gap between Israel's demand for a peace pledge by Egypt and Egyptian insistence on an Israeli withdrawal in the Sinai desert.

"Unfortunately, the differences on a number of key issues have proven irreconcilable," Anderson said. He added that a reassessment "is needed so that all concerned can consider how best to proceed toward a just and lasting peace."

It marked at least a temporary defeat for the American secretary of state after a string of diplomatic triumphs.

In Washington it was announced that President Ford would meet with Kissinger sometime tonight. Ford's press secretary, Ron Nessen, read a statement saying "The President regrets the suspension of the talks that have been taking place over the past two weeks in the Middle East." It added while the parties were unable to reach an overall agreement, Ford "reaffirms the commitment of the United States to continue its efforts to assist the parties in reaching a just and lasting peace."

Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Peres told newsmen, "It was an important week. Israel remains a country with her face turned toward a peaceful settlement."

Kissinger left the prime minister's office with Peres. He patted Peres on the shoulder, waved to the press and entered his black limousine. There was a smile on the secretary's face, but it appeared forced. He said he would make no statement.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy reported at a Cairo news conference that "The step-by-step approach sponsored by the United States, after the failure of Kissinger's mission, comes to an end. We will now proceed to the reconvening of the Geneva conference — the other alternative to peace."

The Soviet Union favors a full Geneva conference, where it would have direct participation in the talks.

Fahmy said Egypt will consult with other Arab states and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and formally apply for reconvening the Geneva conference.

Kissinger "exerted great effort to succeed but he failed because of Israel's intransigence," Fahmy said.

Referring to Israel's demand for a no-war pledge from Cairo, Fahmy said Egypt "made it clear that the state of belligerency will only be ended after Israel's final withdrawal from all Arab territories and the creation of a Palestinian state."

Anderson read the U.S. statement ending the talks to dozens of newsmen packed in the "Oriental Room" of the King David Hotel where Kissinger is staying. He accepted no questions.

The announcement indicated Kissinger would remain in contact with the Mideast parties and with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, cochairman of the Geneva conference. The Geneva talks were suspended after opening in December 1973.

How the Arabs, Israelis reacted

ASWAN, Egypt (AP) — Egypt declared today that it will be Israel's fault if the collapse of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's peace mission leads to "tension and war."

Presidential spokesman Tahseen Bashir, at a news conference here, claimed that the Israeli negotiators were always returning to "their own ideas, which Egypt could not accept." He apparently was referring to Israel's insistence on a pledge of nonbelligerency from Egypt in return for a broad Israeli pullback from the Sinai.

Fahmy repeated Egypt's basic negotiating position — an end to the state of belligerency with Israel would only come as part of an over-all settlement that included Israeli withdrawal from all Arab territories and the creation of a Palestinian state.

Palestinian sources in Beirut, Lebanon, said the collapse of the Kissinger mission was no surprise "because Egypt was virtually isolated from most of its Arab allies and Israel was trying through intransigence to wrest the best bargain in Sinai."

The development was widely regarded in Beirut as a victory for the Soviet Union and Arabs who opposed Kissinger's step-by-step diplomacy as "an attempt to fragment Arab solidarity." Moscow favors the Geneva conference, suspended after its initial opening in December 1973, because it would have direct participation there.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — "It's a bad thing," Ruth Shalgi, an Israeli secretary, said today of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's failure to gain another Middle East disengagement. "It makes the whole situation more doubtful and could start all sorts of things, even another war."

And a Jerusalem hotel waiter who had questioned newsmen about the tense negotiations told them, "That's it, if Kissinger can't do it, who can?"

Some of the men who would have to fight if the Mideast war broke out again approved Israel's refusal to give up vital military points in the Sinai Desert for anything less than a nonbelligerency pledge from Egypt.

"Giving up the Mitla and Gidi passes is suicide," said Jacob Fink, a dual American-Israeli citizen from Scranton, Pa., and an Israeli reservist.

"If the Egyptians aren't ready to end the war, then why hand them better positions to fight from," Fink said.

The country that controls the two passes through the western Sinai mountains holds the key for tank warfare in the desert and a strong offensive and defensive advantage.

Israel said in an official government statement it was prepared to turn the western approaches of the passes over to the United Nations in exchange for a less binding declaration from Egypt and placed the blame squarely on Egypt for failure of the talks.

WALL COLLAPSES, KILLS TWO

Two sheet-covered bodies lie amid the rubble of a collapsed brick wall at a building demolition site in downtown Los Angeles Saturday. A Skid Row hotel was being torn down at the time.

Skid Row wall falls; two killed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A wall of an old hotel being demolished collapsed Saturday, killing two workmen and injuring two others.

The cave-in occurred while 15 workers were salvaging materials at Sixth and Maple Streets in the Skid Row area of downtown Los Angeles.

The other 11 workmen escaped injury. All were employes of the AB&M Trucking Co.

Police identified the dead as Pedro Arias, 28, and Incarnacion Lopez Trujillo, 30, both of Los Angeles.

Dionicio Ynsunsa, 45, was reported in critical condition at California Hospital from head and internal injuries. Rafael Martinez was treated at the scene for minor injuries and released.

Edward Dungee, a workman, said several men were inside the remains of the building when the cave-in occurred.

"The dust and the bricks started shitting down the wall and all of a sudden the wall started moving out and I hollered 'run, run,'" Dungee said.

Dungee said a nearly one-story high stack of bricks piled against the wall caused the cave-in. Fire department Battalion Commander William Bennett said his investigation indicated that was the probable cause.

Argentine terrorists kidnap, gun down 8

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Hooded right-wing terrorists directed by a man wearing a carnival mask murdered eight people, including a woman and a leftist town councilman, early Saturday in a kidnaping and bombing spree, police said.

The deaths raised to 24 the number of persons killed in three days of leftist and rightist ambushes, assassinations and kidnap-executions that added to the political woes of President Isabel Peron's nine-month-old government.

Provincial police give this account of Saturday's slayings:

About 15 men wearing black hoods and one in a macabre carnival mask drove up in seven cars at the home of Councilman Hector Lencinas in Temperly, 13 miles south of Buenos Aires. Lencinas, a member of the radical Peronist Youth, was not home so the gunmen bombed his house and went after him at a local bar.

They barged in with weapons drawn and overpowered him and two companions and pulled them out.

Later, the terrorists drove past the home of a suburban councilwoman and bombed it after finding she was not there.

The group next showed up at the house of construction worker Guillermo Cafferatta. His wife, Gladys, was killed when she tried unsuccesstully to prevent them from kidnaping her husband.

At another suburban home the killers kidnaped three young men, brothers Eduardo and Alfredo Diaz and Pedro Antonio Bauna.

The victims, whose bodies were found strewn along a deserted dirt road, ranged in age from 16 to 29. Most had been shot repeatedly and the stomach of one was torn out, apparently by a bomb.

It was the third straight day of slaughter. On Friday, police found nine victims assassinated, and on Thursday seven persons died in left-and rightwing rubouts.

Police sources said Saturday's slayings bore the signs of a right-wing death squad, known as the "AAA," or Argentine Anti-Communist Alliance.

More than 6,000 workers in three major industries in Villa Constitucion, a city some 200 miles north of Buenos Aires along the Parana River, continued occupying factories.

Coast guard, border guard and police units waited nearby after major antisubversive raids in which more than 100 people were arrested in several cities.

Not bitter, says father after return of kidnaped daughter

SEATTLE (AP) — "Why, of course we're not bitter," said the father of 3-year-old Ann Gordon. The child, blind and seriously ill with a tumor in the optic nerve, returned here Saturday after allegedly being abducted by her babysitter.

The baby sitter, Vicky Jo Martin, 29, was charged in Skagit County, Wash., with second-degree kidnaping, and was named in a federal kidnaping warrant after she disappeared with the child Thursday.

She was being held in the Shasta County Hospital in Redding on $30,000 bail.

Huntly Gordon Jr. of Mount Vernon, Wash., greeted Ann at Seattle-Tacoma airport.

"We think the world of her (Miss Martin). We're all very lucky. Annie is home safe and Vicky now is in a position to get the help she needs. We feel so sorry for her and her family," he said.

The Gordons learned after their daughter disappeared that Miss Martin has suffered from mental illness in the past, the FBI said.

"This is the greatest day in our lives," Gordon said as he, his wife, two other daughters and several relatives greeted Ann.

Miss Martin had walked into the California Highway Patrol Headquarters in Redding with the child, an FBI spokesman said. The little girl was unharmed.

Gordon said, "We don't want to see her prosecuted. We want to see her helped.

"Why Karrie (a daughter) insisted on writing her a letter after we found out where she and Annie were," he added. "That shows what we think of her."

Bike streaker on top of 'Mt. Baldy'

A California Highway Patrolman blinked twice Saturday—he couldn't believe what he was seeing.

"It was a streaker on a bicycle," said CHP Sgt. Bill Winkleman, reporting on the usual incident at Mt. Baldy about 4:55 p.m.

Winkleman said the man, of college-age, was spotted by a highway patrolman riding his bike in the nude southbound on Mt. Baldy Road just south of Mt. Baldy Village.

It turned out that the guy, whose name was not disclosed, was part of a group of college students making a film for their school. The patrolman also noticed several students pointing movie cameras in the "streaker's" direction.

The streaker was turned over to the sheriff's office by the highway patrol. He was held on outstanding traffic warrants, Winkleman said.

STOWAWAY KILLED

No body has been found, but police say there is little doubt that Luis Albert Fula Camacho, 18, above of Bogota, Colombia, was killed stowing away in the landing gear of an Avianca Airlines flight to Miami. Witnesses reported seeing an object which looked like a human body fall into Biscayne Bay at Miami.

Man sprays three women with acid; suspect held

West Covina detectives will try to learn Monday why a 33-year-old man allegedly sprayed three women with an acid substance on their backsides at two local shopping centers.

Police Lt. D. W. Henry said that James Eugene Jenkins, 33, of Glendale was booked Friday for investigation of assault with a caustic chemical.

Police declined to name the three women who suffered minor burns.

According to officers Jenkins allegedly used a squirt gun or a bottle to spray two women at Penny's about 10:40 a.m.

He reportedly went to the Eastland Shopping Center about three miles away, where he sprayed another woman at 1:10 p.m. She was taken to Intercommunityy Hospital at Covina for treatment and released.

Detectives have not yet come up with a motive for the attacks. An alert off-duty officer spotted a car speeding away from the shopping center at the time the second attack occurred, and he wrote down the license plate number, which police said led them to Jenkins' home.

10 in beauty shop robbed of $6,000

WEST COVINA (AP) — Two robbers stole $6,000 in money and jewelry from 10 persons in a beauty salon here, police said today.

The robbers brandished pistols and ordered the nine women and one man to the rear of the building Friday.

There they ripped wires from appliances and bound their victims before robbing them, Police Lt. D. W. Henry said.

Fords to vacation in the Southland

PALM SPRINGS (AP) — President and Mrs. Ford will arrive in Southern California March 29 for a 10-day Easter vacation in the Palm Springs area, a family friend said Saturday.

The Fords will land at the Palm springs Airport and stay at the exclusive Thunderbird Country Club in nearby Rancho Mirage until April 7, when they will depart for Washington, according to Fred Wilson, a local insurance broker.

DOES HIS THING

Threat of presidential veto

Final drive on to enact nation's biggest tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Final efforts to enact the largest tax cut in the nation's history got under way Saturday with both houses of Congress assigning conferees to work out a compromise.

Key House members predicted the final cut will be closer to the $19.9 billion version they approved than the $33.1 billion approved by the Senate, with extraneous changes in the tax code weeded out.

Meanwhile, President Ford was relaying word to members of the House-Senate conference committee Saturday that he may veto the tax cut bill unless it is stripped of what he considers extraneous amendments.

White House officials, repeating Ford's goal of a "clean tax cut bill," left open the possibility of a veto. "I wouldn't close the door," said one official.

By the time the Senate passed the bill early Saturday it provided, among other things, that most individual taxpayers would get rebates of $120 to $240 on their 1974 taxes, those for which returns now being filed, and a $40 cut in 1975 taxes.

An optional tax credit would help families with less than $20,000 income who itemize deductions. A special "work bonus" up to $400 would apply to low-income working families. Each Social Security benefit recipient would get a one-time $100 bonus.

The House bill provides a smaller 1974 rebate and a special tax break for single persons and couples too poor to pay income taxes.

Staff specialists for the tax cut conferees on Saturday began analyzing the numerous amendments the Senate made to the House-passed tax-cut bill. The conferees themselves go to work Monday morning, trying to produce a version on which both chambers can vote by Wednesday, the target day for beginning the Easter recess. Leaders in both chambers said they think the deadline will be met.

With little debate, the House voted 281 to 18 Saturday to set up the conference, already requested by the Senate.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chief House conferee, told newsmen he thinks agreement will be reached, but added, "It will be a rough conference . . ."

Ullman, chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means committee, said there is now no doubt that the long-controversial oil depletion allowance will be repealed, since both versions provide for ending it though on different terms. Remaining to be settled, he said, is whether the Senate's exemption allowing smaller producers to retain the allowance will be kept and on what schedule the repeal may be phased in.

Ullman said, however, other changes affecting overseas business operations "introduce tremendous complications . . These are the kinds of things that need hearings and full committee considerations."

House Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said he thinks agreement will be reached and that the final figure will be closer to the House than the Senate version.

Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., the majority leader, also said he thinks there is a good chance of agreement this week.

The 1974 tax rebates in the Senate bill were estimated to cost the Treasury $10 billion, the optional $200 a person tax credit — more valuable than the $750 exemption for many taxpayers — $6.1 billion, the reduction in 1975 taxes $2.3 billion, and the $100 Social Security payment $3.4 billion.

The "Work Bonus" providing a maximum $400 tax cut for working families with less than $8,000 income, a sort of offset for Social Security tax, would cost $1.5 billion.

A provision for a reduction of up to $2,000 in taxes for persons purchasing new homes between March 13 and Dec. 31 would cost $1 billion.

Other Senate provisions and their cost include:

—Extra emergency aid for persons out of work for a year, 150 million to $200 million.

—Tax cuts for the cost of babysitters for working parents, up to $600 each, $800 million.

—Tax benefits for persons installing insulation and similar energy-saving equipment and those buying solar heating or cooling devices, $500 million.

Funny thing happened to this clown on his way downtown

By TIMOTHY HARPER

Newman, 24, is a street clown, a throwback to the wandering ministrels, jesters and fools of the Middle Ages.

Like his predecessors, he wanders the streets in his outrageous makeup, collecting stares and squeals of disbelief, and occasional coins.

"I work a lot of birthday parties and things like that," says Newman, better known as Harley the Clown. "Out on the streets, some people try to ignore me, but I've never had a bad reaction. Some people see me and don't know what to think."

Newman, a part-time sculptor, says the most varied reaction comes in restaurants and other places of business.

"Some people say, hey, wait a minute. A clown's not supposed to be here. What's this clown doing here?" he says.

A graduate of Beloit College, Newman has been in the clown business for two years. He says economic hard times have not hurt his trade.

"People still want to have a good time. They still want something special, and they're willing to pay for it," says Newman, whose rates begin at $20 for a two-hour birthday party.

"I want to travel all over to some of the bigger cities, just putting on performances in parks and passing the hat," he says.

Since his unicycle is his only mode of transportation, he figures to do a lot of riding backwards down highways while hitchhiking between cities.

"I take the wheel everywhere," he says.

Newman, who says he turned to clowning when a tough chemistry course dimmed childhood dreams of becoming a doctor, says being a street clown isn't really all that unusual.

"Socially, clowns have always been around and they probably always will be," he says. "After all, there are plenty of clowns in business, religion, politics and every other field. The only difference is that I wear makeup and know people are laughing at me."

Suspect held in robbery of market

Joseph Vailpando of 304 E. Olive St., Pomona, was captured by officers who stopped his car not far from the scene of robbery. He was booked into the Pomona jail.

Thomas Castanos, 27, the store clerk, told police a man entered the market at 4:20 a.m. and ordered him to open the cash register and lie on the floor. The man simulated a weapon, then took a small amount of cash and fled. Also in POMONA, a 44-year-old La Verne woman told officers she was assaulted and her purse snatched by a thief who ran up behind her at San Bernardino Avenue and Richards St., Saturday at 1:30 a.m.

SPOTLIGHT ON CRIME

Olga Nielsen said the robber took her purse containing a small amount of cash and knocked her to the pavement. The woman suffered cuts to her chin, left eyelid, and knee and complained of pain in her arm. She was treated at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

The victim could supply no description of the robber.

In CLAREMONT, a cook from the Straw Hat Pizza Parlor, 1064 W. Foothill Blvd., was robbed of the day's receipts when he went to place them in a night deposit chute at Bank of America, 995 W. Foothill.

Daniel Regan, 24, said he was surprised by a man who walked up behind him, at 2 a.m. Saturday. The robber apparently had no weapon, police said. They had no description of the bandit.

In Covina, a bearded robber held up a gas station at 20354 Arrow Highway, Friday night.

Otto Tuley, 37, the station employe, said he was approached in his cash booth at the station by a man with a .45-caliber revolver who ordered him to lie down on the floor "and you won't get hurt."

The suspect took cash from the drawer, and fled on foot. He was further described as wearing levis and a blue cord jacket, and being about 30 years old, 6-2, 220 pounds.

POWER VACUUM

You probably think of motor vehicles as gasoline-powered and vacuum cleaners as electric, right? Well, John Hoke, technical adviser for National Capital parks in Washington, demonstrates a switcheroo. An electric cart, designed to cut down on air pollution, is equipped with a gas-powered vacuum cleaner which will be used to remove trash from the parks.

Prison inmates stage show: Watergate tapes

NORFOLK, Mass. (AP) — A few years ago Mark Frechette was the star of the film "Zabriskie Point." Now he is a prisoner at the state correctional institute here serving a term for armed robbery of a Boston bank on April 29, 1973.

That was the day former President Richard M. Nixon refused to turn over the Watergate tapes to Judge John Sirica.

On Saturday night, Frechette and a fellow inmate who took part in the bank robbery take up the Watergate tapes when they put on the second performance of a 90-minute inmate production, "The White House Transcripts."

The production, which made its debut Friday night before 200 inmates and correction officers, re-creates Watergate conversations of Nixon and some of his top aides.

Having the prisoners do the show was the idea of Thomas McCann of Transcripts Film Co. of Boston, co-producer of the same show performed by professional actors and shown on television in the United States and Canada.

McCann donated the script and the set of his television production for the production and spent one day a week at the institution as a technical advisor.

The prisoners worked four months on the production, studying a videotape of the television show to prepare for their own.

Frechette plays the off-tage voice of former presidential lawyer Richard Kleindienst and is one of three producers for the show. One of the two other producers is Sheldon Terry Bernhard who took part in the Boston bank robbery and is now serving a six-to-15-year prison term. Bernhard portrays Nixon.

"We'll play it for anyone who wants to see it," said Bernhard.

Highway death toll up, says CHP

Californians putting on more mileage

SACRAMENTO (AP) — "Deaths are up and mileage is up" on the state's highways, and the increased driving is helping push the highway death toll higher, the California Highway Patrol said Saturday.

Kent Milton, the CHP information officer, said: "With both deaths and mileage increased, we can draw a pretty logical conclusion that they are related.

"But the fact that the deaths in 1975 are not up to the figure in 1973 suggests that the 55 mile per hour limit is responsible for that. The 55 m.p.h. limit is still there and we still are getting a benefit from it," Milton added.

In January, February and March of this year, Milton said, gas sales have been up about seven per cent above sales in those same months in 1974 when the energy crisis was in full force.

The CHP added in January and February this year there were 581 deaths on California roads, compared to 468 in those two months in 1974. In that period in 1973 there were 668 deaths.

"Mileage is back up and that's why deaths are coming back up," Milton said in an interview.

The number of motorists on the highways has climbed to over 16 million this year from a level of about 15 million last year, Milton said.

"But whether it's more motorists or the same guys driving more miles, what's the difference?" Milton asked.

Milton added the CHP's previous commissioner, Walter Pudinski, said in the past that when people were trying to figure out why the highway death toll was dropping "they overlooked reduced traffic."

"He never said the 55 m.p.h. limit wasn't helping. And Dan Lanza (the current commissioner) says the 55 limit and reduced traffic are both big factors."

State Farm auto insurance rates to go up 9.4%

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (AP) —State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. will raise auto insurance rates in California by an average of 9.4 per cent, or $14 a policy, on April 3.

The increase, which will add $24.3 million a year to premium costs for the 1.7 million California policy holders, varies from 2.1 per cent in Imperial county to 19.6 per cent in downtown Los Angeles, the company announcement said.

State Farm said the increase is its first since 1970 in California where it is the largest auto insurer in the state. Since then, the company said, refunds of $29.5 million were made to policy holders in dividends because there was a general decline in accident frequency.

Savings resulting from lower accident frequency have recently been more than offset by a sharp rise in auto repair and parts costs, State Farm said. The insurance firm cited price indices that showed the cost of crash parts went up 71 per cent and repair costs 39 per cent since 1970.

An Ontario man became that city's second traffic victim of 1975 early Saturday after his 1953 car collided with a foreign auto at Mission Boulevard and Campus Avenue.

Ronald Gene Cortez, 24, of 837 S. Greenwood Ave., Ontario, died at Ontario Community Hospital a short time after his vehicle was hit broadside by a car driven by Fred John Espinosa, 20, of Rosemead.

Espinosa told officers that he was southbound on Campus Avenue about 1:59 a.m. and started to enter the intersection when he saw he had a green light.

He said he could not put on his brakes in time to avoid hitting the Cortez vehicle eastbound on Mission Boulevard.

A 23-year-old Pomona man was reported in critical condition after his van collided with two other vehicles Saturday morning on the San Bernardino Freeway at Towne Avenue in Pomona.

Alan G. Russell of 1577 Carol Drive suffered head injuries and was admitted to Pomona Valley Community Hospital's intensive care unit after the 10:15 a.m. accident.

Highway patrol officers said Russell's foreign van rear-ended a truck-trailer driven by Sammy Griggs, 48, of Colton. Russell's car then spun out, officers said, and ended up in another freeway lane where it was struck by a car driven by Ralph Wood, 32, of Sun Valley.

The victim's van was knocked onto the shoulder of the freeway, and it took a fire rescue squad some time to free Russell from the wreckage. No one else was injured in the collision.

Human misery of S. Viet's mass retreat

TUY HOA, South Vietnam (AP) — The helicopters spill out weeping women, children limping on bare feet and soldiers in blood-caked camouflage fatigues.

Some carry satchels and straw baskets, some have nothing but their lives.

The refugees, part of the biggest exodus of the Vietnam war, are flown to this coastal province headquarters, about 240 miles northeast of Saigon, from a column stalled 15 miles away.

An old woman drops down on the grass near the helicopter pad. "Now I know I am alive!" she says. She has been on the road a week.

Two children arrive alone. Their father put them aboard a helicopter thinking their pregnant mother was on board. But she was not.

A schoolteacher says his family walked through the jungle to avoid North Vietnamese shellfire and thought their luck had changed when they were able to climb aboard a truck. But later they realized that their 5-year-old child was missing in the scramble.

"It was everyone for himself," said a woman whose family ran a popular restaurant in Kontum. "We started with a car along with other people and we bought gasoline from straggling soldiers.

"Then when our car broke down we marched by day and night through the jungle trails. We bought water from Montagnard villagers.

"We were near death several times. Once the military police had a battle with the rangers. There were many deaths but I don't know how many."

Military sources said the fight broke out after jostling for position in the long column of refugees streaming from the central highlands.

"We are very happy to be here," the woman said. "We have no car but we are alive and can work to buy another car."

An army major, hoping his family has made the 150-mile trek from Pleiku, watches each incoming chopper intently.

"I was going to school in Dalat and my family was in Pleiku," said the major, a gentle, gray-haired man. "If you hear anything about them, please let me know."

Relatives are lined up outside the province headquarters and around the hospital where nearly 300 wounded have been brought.

"It was such misery I canot describe it," says a mother after frantically searching for and finally finding all 10 of her children. "I haven't seen my husband since we were separated during the first shelling."

U.S. apathy toward Viets 'sickens' ex-POW

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Rear Adm. Jeremiah A. Denton Jr., who led the return of American prisoners of war from North Vietnam two years ago, said Saturday that renewed warfare in Southeast Asia and the American people's apathy toward it "sickens me."

Denton, who set the tone for the return of the POWs with his "God Bless America" speech as he stepped off the first plane from Hanoi on Feb. 12, 1973, also predicted serious morale problems in the military and a loss of American credibility overseas if the United States does not take urgent action.

"I trust and respect the right of Congress to reflect the opinions of the American people," Denton said. "With respect to Southeast Asia, I think that opinion is wrong."

Denton spent 7½ years in a North Vietnamese prisoner of war camp and was awarded the Navy Cross for resisting extreme torture at the hands of his captors.

He now serves as commandant of the Armed Forces Staff College here.

"The present requests and policies of the President and secretaries of defense and state require urgent action," Denton said, adding that current North Vietnamese advances into South Vietnam and resulting apathy on the part of the American people "sickens me and it's causing me a great deal of loss of sleep."

While expressing concern over the potential loss of freedom by Southeast Asians, Denton voiced worries over a loss of American credibility around the world and the possibility of plunging morale in the military.

ADM. J. A. DENTON

"The problem is, I've had (men) come into my office weeping like babies and saying, 'My God, admiral, I did three tours over there, I lost 27 friends, three of them my best buddies. I was wounded four times. We would have kept Khe Sahn. I would have gladly given my life to hold it at any cost, and now those guys have it up there.' And he started to cry like a baby. I was already fairly shaken up by it."

American reluctance to save South Vietnam could cause "a problem of military morale," he said.

"It could affect the best military men we have and could have a terribly traumatic effect."

But he said the key question in a case where the United States sits idly by would be the effect on U.S. commitments around the world.

"At stake is real — not cosmetic — success in negotiations on any issue, including oil," he said, voicing concern about "the credibility of all U.S. commitments to friends, and threats to enemies, in any area of the world."

"I don't hate the North Vietnamese, but I know that they will continue to try to enmesh the South Vietnamese in the same system of tyranny to which the North turned in the desperation of hunger — unless the United States continues to demonstrate its resolve to help the South Vietnamese remain free and then provides the promised economic help to both sides," he said.

Denton said the American people have been subjected to poor news reporting from Southeast Asia, contending that "the news programs of the major television networks, with their redundant access to the minds of the American people, to whom Congress responds, have not been presenting the real news in Southeast Asia.

"The real news is that tens of millions of Southeast Asians have voted with their feet for freedom," he said. "They have confirmed that vote in blood, resisting Communist forces which have recently received quadrupled aid from the U.S.S.R. and China."

Pope voices Portugal, Indochina anguish

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI voiced anguish over Indochina and the future of Portugal on Saturday on the eve of Holy Week celebrations leading up to Easter.

"With pain we look at the manifold conflicts which are currently under way in the world," the 77-year-old pontiff said in an address to members of the Vatican Justice and Peace Commission.

He spoke of the "anguishing tragedy" of populations in war-torn Vietnam and Cambodia, referred to guerrilla warfare in Ethiopia, tension in the Middle East and Cyprus, then asked:

"And how can we fail to mention the fears raised by the situation which is coming about in Portugal?"

He made no other comment on the nation where leftists are moving toward more control amid disorders and tension.

The Pope's message came on the eve of Palm Sunday when he will bless palm leaves and olive branches and hand them out in a solemn ceremony ushering in the Holy Week.

The Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano echoed the Pope's worries about Indochina and the masses of refugees fleeing before the Communist-led advance.

Referring to Palm Sunday, it asked in an editorial:

"Today the palms of hope are festively waved at the entrance of churches. But will we be celebrating a bloody Easter?"

The paper referred to the reported killing of a Catholic prelate, Msgr. Trinh Chinh Truc, in the attack of Ban Me Thuot in South Vietnam.

It said the city's bishop, Nguyen Huy Mai, and another bishop, Nguyen Van Hoa, were taken prisoners by the assailants along with several priests.

Close only English Catholic college

LONDON (AP) — The Roman Catholic hierarchy is closing Corpus Christi College in London, its only institute of religious education in England and Wales.

A statement from the office of John Cardinal Heenan, archbishop of Westminster, blamed "prohibitive maintenance costs."

But a Church newspaper said Saturday that another factor is the lack of teachers with theological knowledge.

TRADED TO RUSS

Forty Alaskan musk oxen, like this calf at San Francisco Zoo, are scheduled to be sent to Siberia as part of a U.S.-Soviet exchange. In return American scientists hope to get a shipment of Siberian polecats.

One million years after they left

Musk oxen on way back to Siberia

WASHINGTON (AP) — A million years after their ancestors evolved in north-central Asia, 40 arctic musk oxen from Alaska will head back to Siberia aboard Soviet cargo planes as part of a U.S.-Soviet exchange of endangered animal species.

Soviet scientists are to arrive today in New York and then fly on to Alaska to join their American counterparts in overseeing capture and shipment of the hulking shaggy animals, which are now extinct in Siberia.

Eskimos piloting snowmobiles will catch the musk oxen—whose forebears migrated from Asia across a then-existing land bridge — on Nunivak Island, a national wildlife refuge off the western Alaska coast.

The 700-pound animals will then be loaded into Soviet Ilyushin 14 transport aircraft and flown across the Bering Sea to the northern fringes of Siberia, where the Soviets intend to reestablish oxen herds.

In return, U.S. scientists hope to receive later this year a shipment of Siberian polecats, to help augment a comparable species which could face extinction on this continent.

The animal exchange program, formulated under a 1972 U.S.-Soviet agreement on environment protection, aims to demonstrate the scientific, nonpolitical benefits of detente.

However, the Interior Department has been reluctant to release full details on the musk oxen project because of concern that it might exacerbate anti-Soviet sentiment in Alaska.

As one Interior Department official explained, "the American commercial fisheries hate the Russians. And if they knew a Russian was coming into town, all hell could break loose at the Anchorage airport. So the Russian team is just going to zip in and zip out of Anchorage."

Also, the Interior Department has sought to minimize possible federal-state friction through advance briefings and coordination with Alaska officials.

"Alaska is acutely sensitive to the federal presence up there," said the Interior Department official. "In effect, they resent it because the federal government is not present in any other state to the degree that it is in Alaska.

To help insure state cooperation, E.U. Curtis Bohlen, an Interior deputy assistant secretary, flew to Alaska to confer with Gov. Jay Hammond.

Heading the American team in the oxen roundup on Nunivak will be Ron Skoog, an Interior Department biologist in charge of a broader project to study the ecological impact of man in the Arctic.

Soviet scientists working with him will be Savva Uspensky, a specialist on Arctic birds and polar bears, and Mikhail Tarkov, head of a reindeer conservation program in Siberia's Magadon region.

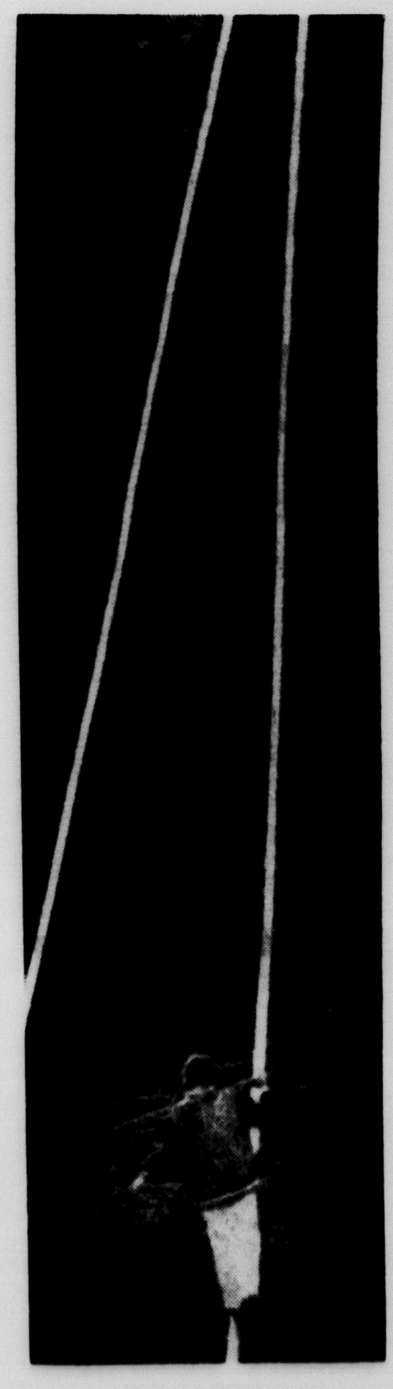
Park department to sponsor trip to Lion Country

The Pomona Park and Recreation Department will sponsor a youth trip to Lion Country Safari on Thursday.

The trip is open to youngsters from 8 to 17 years of age. Cost $2.25, which includes transportation, admission, rides, insurance and supervision. Youths from 13 to 17 years of age will be on their own after the tour and until time to return to Pomona.

The bus for the trip will leave Ganesha Park at 9 a.m. and return at approximately 3:30 p.m. Participants should provide their own lunch.

Reservations should be made by Monday at the Park Recreation Department at Pomona City Hall.



IT'S SPRING

Railroad tracks turn silver from the first day of spring's setting sun as young John Fyre wends his way home from a trip to the old fishin' hole in Jackson, Tenn. But rapidly changing weather conditions a few hours later spawned a tornado which damaged 18 trailers in a park and injured 17 persons in Jackson Saturday. None of the injured was listed in serious condition.

Inflation squeezing California schools savagely, says Riles

SAN DIEGO (AP) — California schools are being squeezed by "a savage rate of inflation," Wilson Riles, the state schools chief, said Saturday.

In remarks prepared for a speech before the Association of California School Administrators, Riles said given the economic hard times, schools must show they do their job in order to get more money.

"Letting people know about our schools doesn't mean we go out and hire a platoon of gray flannel public relations men. We shouldn't put forth a glib high pressure campaign, and we can't afford one, anyway," Riles added.

Riles, the state Superintendent of Public Instruction, then asked the administrators: "How many of you know the name of the reporter that covers education for your local newspaper? Too many educators regard the press as a problem, not an opportunity to tell their story to the public."

Neither television people nor newspaper reporters are out "to get us," Riles said. He added it was up to school officials to let the public know "that our schools are doing a good job for most of our kids, and we're trying to do a better job."

Woman brain surgeon

CHICAGO (UPI) — Carrie Lou Walters can chisel, hammer, saw and sew with the best neurosurgeons in the business.

She has power tools, support from her colleagues, plenty of drive and more than five of the eight required years of neurosurgical training behind her.

At 29, as No. 2 senior resident in the University of Chicago hospital system, she has served as "primary surgeon" on a team of three in emergency cases, depressed-skull fractures and one intercerebral hematoma.

These days, many women study to become doctors. Few become surgeons and almost none go into neurosurgery.

"It's because of the physical stamina required," she said. "It's simply a more demanding area of medicine. One is on 'their' feet for such long hours."

Carefully, she omitted all third-person "his" references from her conversation.

"Though most brain surgery is very delicate," she said, "getting through a skull is really carpentry, in practical terms. The power tools we are using now have really been a help to me. In fact one of my advisers said those tools are making it possible for me to go into this field."

DR. CARRIE WALTERS

"Of course, if one wants to do something badly enough, you'll do it no matter what kind of energy it takes. And, power tools or not, certainly the hours haven't changed."

Dr. Walters —with no notice —will often have to put in 36 hours straight. Other times, she will go three 16-hour days in a row.

"It has a great element of unpredictability. If you know you're going to have to be on 16 hours a day for three days, then you can prepare for it. But surgery is not like that. There's always the element of trauma (emergency victims)."

She has met no resistance from her male colleagues because, she said, she has never looked for it.

"I go into a situation thinking there is a job to be done and I can help get it done."

Patients, she said, often prefer having a woman take care of them. "They have some preconceived notions that because you are a woman you are going to understand their emotions better," she said, but denied there was any truth to it.

"No. I think men understand every bit as well, though I don't think women are any less understanding," she said.

Dr. Walters, a Salem, Ore., native, said she decided to become a neurosurgeon when she was eight —and with no parental prompting. Both her parents are retail store clerks.

"I believe my family thinks I'm a little crazy," she said.

"But if I didn't love it, I'd get out. You'd be crazy to remain in this if you didn't like it. On general principles I hate to get up in the morning. But knowing I have something to go to that I enjoy doing and that's always a challenge makes it worth it."

Bernadette Devlin

New look for young dissident

By COLIN FROST
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST (AP) — Bernadette McAliskey is back in politics with a new struggle and a new set of beliefs.

Six years ago, as Bernadette Devlin, she became the youngest woman ever to sit in the British Parliament, elected after leading Catholic civil rights marchers to the barricades against the Ulster government.

She lost her seat in 1974, and since then she has been reorganizing her political beliefs, and raising her 3-year-old daughter, born before her marriage to schoolteacher Michael McAliskey.

Fifteen weeks ago she formed the Irish Republican Socialist Party with Seamus Costello, who had been expelled from the "Official," Marxist Irish Republican Army. Now Mrs. McAliskey's new party and the "Officials" are in hot dispute over the future course of troubled Northern Ireland.

Mrs. McAliskey said she fears that she might be harmed.

Mrs. McAliskey is 26 now but physically the same pocket dynamo who emerged from student politics to international headlines. Only her ideas have changed, she explained.

The blazing row with the "Officials" is basically a row between Stalinism and Trotskyism, she said. HER Irish Republican Socialist Party is on the Trotskyite side.

She said she supports the "anti-imperialist" struggle of the "Provisionals" against the British Army — a struggle in abeyance since the Feb. 10 ceasefire.

But the Provos, she insisted, are politically bankrupt and devoid of ideas as to what to do once the British leave Northern Ireland.

The "Officials" she accused of abandoning all struggle. They have approved a ceasefire since May 1972, believing that armed anti-British action is counter productive.

Four years ago she was calling herself a Marxist while admitting she had never read Marx. The deficiency has been remedied with surprising results.

"Karl Marx as an individual," she said, "was a badmannered pig. I can't stand self-styled Marxists who think they have to accept not just his ideas but imitate his arrogance and lack of patience.

"Marx is not God. Intellectuals who preach his theses have never tried them out on the ground or at the factory gate. The task is to relate his analysis to what's happening now."

Flexibility is her new watchword.

"I started out from a liberal position, demonstrating and agitating for reform," she said.

"But I discovered the system was incapable of reform. I had to look elsewhere, to read and learn. I may change again. People who never change their politics are either fools or some kind of robot."

Some estimates have put the strength of Mrs. McAliskey's new party at around 700. She believes 300 would be nearer the mark but says she's not worried by numbers. Discipline and political awareness are more important than size, she said.

She looked back over six years to the idealism of the civil rights movement and its fight against the now officially admitted injustices against Roman Catholics in Northern Ireland.

With more than 1,150 dead, has it been worth it?

"Yes," she said. "Some people accused the civil rights movement of moving too fast. Some said it went too slow.

"But the injustices were there. The side effects, the shootings and bombings, would have been the same whichever way we played it.

"The idealism is still there, too. People talk about war weariness. But that's a concept I don't believe in. Some will go on fighting."

Her instructions for returning by car to Belfast had an Irish flavor: "Get back to the bottom of the road and there's a signpost for Portadown. That's the road to Belfast. The signpost points the wrong way."

Funeral services will be at 1 p.m. Monday at the First Lutheran Church of Pomona. Burial will follow in Oakdale Cemetery in Clendora. The Richardson-Peterson Mortuary in Ontario is in charge.

Thread sewing on the way out

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Sonic sewing machines that use air pressure to fuse seams may some day make thread obsolete, says Gail Skinner, extension clothing specialist at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

Miss Skinner said the machines have been used since the 1950s for plastic rainwear. The air pressure they create causes vibrations of very high frequency. The vibrations cause friction, which causes heat and bonds or fuses fabric. Once fused, an ultrasonic bond cannot be altered. In fact, the bond outlasts the fabric.

Gas tax would hurt Southland, Lloyd

REP. JIM LLOYD, D-35th Dist., has urged that energy conservation measures be regionally oriented and that heavy gasoline taxes not be imposed on Southern California.

He testified recently before the House Ways and Means Committee which is formulating energy legislation. Lloyd said he encouraged solutions to the energy crisis be on a regional basis, especially with regard to increased taxation, allocation or rationing of gasoline.

He told the committee that Southern California has no mass rapid transit system and that public transportation is in reality the private automobile.

Referring to a proposed 40-cent per gallon gas tax, Lloyd said this would financially "jeopardize millions of people.

"Any measure that would further increase the pump price of gasoline would serve as a penalty to those holding jobs and as a deterrent to those who need their cars to look for jobs."

As a future solution, Lloyd asked the committee to urge Detroit car makers to produce vehicles capable of getting at least 20 miles per gallon of gasoline.

ASSEMBLYMAN BILL McVITTIE, D-65th Dist., said he cannot at present support a $86.6 million state capitol complex plan because of California's grave economic condition.

He supported, however, a plan to restore the condemned capitol for continued use by the state legislature. Repair funds were included in last year's budget.

A Los Angeles architectural firm recently unveiled plans to renovate the present capitol and also construct a new office structure with chambers for the Assembly and Senate.

The cost was estimated at $34.5 million for restoration work and $62.1 million for the new building.

"Every spending decision we make today must be weighed against the needs of nearly one million unemployed who are suffering from this depression," McVittie said the previous legislature including $42 million for the capitol improvelent. "And I'm for using it to keep this magnificent structure as a living and working center for the government,' he said.

LLOYD is sponsoring legislation that would require colleges participating in federal student loan programs to establish an equitable refund policy, execute performance bonds and inform students taking out loans about the college, its purpose and scope.

"The bill will serve to protect students and the federal government from fly-by-night colleges and universities which get student loan funds and then close, leaving students and the federal government holding the bag," he explained.

LLOYD has urged that Navy warships be used to protect U.S. tuna boats that have been seized while fishing more than 12 miles outside Ecuador.

He also recommended that all U.S. aid to Ecuador be cut off until U.S. tuna boats can safely and without paying for "exorbitant" licenses harvest the international tuna crop.

"During the past 15 years, Ecuador which claims territorial waters out to 200 miles from its shores, has seized 136 American tuna boats," said Lloyd. "These boats have been fined by the Ecuadorean government and crews have been imprisoned.

"The United States has every right to fish beyond 12 miles from Ecuador's coast in accordance with international law. If Ecuador chooses to ignore this international law, I suggest we enforce it with an escort of Naval warships," he said.

Legislation which would create a statewide certified medical milk commission was introduced by McVITTIE.

If enacted into law, McVittie's proposed commission would regulate and control the production and marketing by dairies of certified raw milk throughout California.

Presently only Los Angeles County has a certified medical milk commission. The new commission would establish uniform statewide standards.

"Certified raw milk is the highest grade of milk available to the public," said McVittie. "It is a basic, natural product. Nothing has been added or taken away. It is pure and nutritious.

"This new commission will assure all California consumers that the most rigid health standards have been met in the production of this milk," he added.

McVittie's bill will adopt rigid standards established by the American Association of Medical Commissioners. The commission would be comprised of four medical physicians and a veterinarian.

$62.1 MILLION PROPOSED new east wing addition to the state capitol building in Sacramento has not drawn the approval of Assemblyman Bill McVittie. He would rather see a much smaller amount spent on renovating the old Capitol Building shown at the rear of this architect's concept.

Anti-abortion group seeking valley office

The Pomona Valley-West End Right to Life League, an anti-abortion organization, is seeking volunteer members in order to expand services.

League Chairman John Stanley of Pomona said workers plan to expand their speaker's bureau, establish a committee to distribute educational materials to schools, churches and libraries and form a committee to work towards opening a pro-life center in the valley.

Stanley said the league had just completed a training session which provided a substantial number of listeners for league telephone counseling service.

"We hope now to establish a mini-center and employ a social worker several days a week to work with the Lifeline telephone counseling to provide more effective and convenient services to those seeking alternatives to abortion," said Stanley.

These services, he explained, would include immediate counseling and tests to confirm pregnancy.

Stanley, an officer of the Southern California Right to Life League, Los Angeles, said pro life centers have opened in Northridge, Santa Ana and Whittier.

"At the present time, the Whittier Center will accept girls from Pomona and the West End, but the local league needs its own facility," said Stanley.

The Southern California league is looking forward to having such service available in each of its 14 chapters, he explained.

Funding is the big problem in this area, Stanley said estimated it would cost $8,000 a year to maintain a pro life center.

"We hope to enlarge our membership and set up a committee for a center whose members will solicit donations from churches and other groups that may be supportive of girls who choose life for their babies," said Stanley.

Anyone interested in working with the pro life group may contact Stanley at 629-5763.

A speaker's bureau training session is planned and anyone wanting to volunteer to serve may call chairman Paul Vadnais at 982-7390.

The league is non-sectarian.

Passion Week to open with a breakfast

A hot cooked breakfast will begin the celebration of Passion Week at Faith Lutheran Church of San Dimas today.

Serving will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the church. Worship service will be held at 10 a.m. when the Rev. Ray F. Kibler, pastor, speaks on the theme "Is It I--Allowing Jesus to be Jesus?"

The adult choir, under the direction of Jime Linde, and the junior choir, under the direction of Janice Kibler, will both participate in the service.

Passion Week services will be held on Holy Thursday and Good Friday, both services at 7:30 p.m. The Thursday program will take the form of a service of Holy Communion. Friday's service will be a remembering of the purpose of Christ's suffering and death.

Presbyterian churches to hold vesper rites

Congregations of six valley Presbyterian churches will join for a Palm Sunday vesper service at 4:30 p.m. at First Presbyterian church, Pomona today.

Speaker will be the Rev. Eugene Huff, newly elected executive presbyter of San Gabriel Presbytery.

Participants will be the Rev. James W. Angell, of the Claremont Church; the Rev. Richard C. Engdahl, Diamond Bar; the Rev. Osvaldo b. Garcia, La Verne Emmanuel; the Rev. John S. Springer, La Verne Heights; the Rev. Ivan C. Walks, South Hills; andthe Rev. George A. Wilson, Pomona.

Christopher Trussell, Claremont, will be at the organ.

Tenebrae rites on Good Friday

A special Tenebrae service will be held on Good Friday at the Trinity Lutheran Church of Montclair.

The service in which candles, songs and readings are coordinated while telling the history of Jesus will be held at 7:30 p.m.

The Maundy Thursday service at 7:30 p.m. will feature celebration of Communion.

The Rev. Maynard Saeger will speak on the topic "God is My Teacher" at the 10 a.m. Sunday service.

Rites to feature hymns, readings

Prayers, hymns, folk songs and readings will be included in the Union Good Friday service at the Holy Name of Mary Catholic Church in San Dimas at 7:30 p.m.

The service is sponsored by the Bonita Ministerial Fellowship. Each station of the cross will be led by one of the ministers of that fellowship and other clergy.

Protestant and Catholic hymns and contemporary Christian songs by the church youth will be sung. The public is invited.

2-wheeled bicycles top dangerous list

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two-wheeled bicycles top the hazardous products list of the Consumer Product Safety Commission. In an efort to reduce the one-million-a-year bike-related injuries, the commission has adopted mandatory safety standards. They call for, among other things, visible reflectors on fenders, wheels and pedals, and protective coverings or edges for fenders and protruding bolts and chains. The standards took effect January 1.

Piggy prize

CHICAGO (UPI) — "Bringing home the bacon" originally referred to a pig, not a paycheck. The phrase grew out of the practice at rural fairs of giving the porker he'd caught to the winner of the greased pig contest.

NOTICE OF DETERMINATION

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, in accordance with City of La Verne Resolution No. 73-1, as amended, that the proposed application submitted by Apollo Development Corporation for a subdivision, Tentative Tract 23294, on the property located on the west side of Emerald Avenue north of Bowdoin Street, for the reasons that it conforms to appropriate zoning to the adopted General Plan Land Use Element, that it lies northerly of existing multiple residential developments, and existing adjacent major streets may accommodate increased traffic, the proposed development will not have a significant adverse effect on the environment if and when all federal, state and local ordinances, rules and regulations have been complied with and the following conditions are taken into consideration:

1. A satisfactory circulation pattern that conforms to City Standards.
2. Conformance to the Master Plan of Drainage.
3. Particular consideration for the preservation of existing plant life on said property.
4. Designed in such a manner as to minimize the use of energy through appropriate siting and insulation.
5. Notification by developer to potential buyers of possible freeway location.
6. Dwelling units constructed to include provisions to insure that internal noise levels will not exceed 45 dBA.
7. Precise Plan of Design approval.

If any interested party wishes to inquire, copies of Resolution No. 73-1, as amended, and further details regarding this project are on file in the office of the City Clerk.

Battle of the throwaway bottle is growing

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The battle of the bottle is over in Oregon, but the state still provides an army of statistics in the war over bills to ban throwaway bottles and cans in other states.

As in Oregon, those in other states pushing for bills to ban the throwaways by requiring deposits are finding the fighting tough.

Of the estimated 40 states considering minimum deposit legislation this year, at least three have killed it and none has adopted it. An industry spokesman in Oregon says bottle bills have been killed in about 80 legislative sessions across the nation in the past 2½ years.

Oregon, prodded by Gov. Tom McCall and environmentalists, adopted its law in 1971, and it took effect in fall 1972. The law requires five cents deposit on beer and soft drink containers and bans pull top cans. It allows a reduced deposit of two cents on bottles of standardized size and shape usable by more than one bottler.

Vermont and South Dakota are the only other states that place limitations on beverage bottles and cans.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., has introduced national legislation patterned after the Oregon law.

Surveys on the results of Oregon's law are cited by both sides in the bottle law controversy. While the surveys disagree on many points, they agree that Oregon's law, to one degree or another, has:

—Reduced roadside litter.

—Cost the beverage industry money.

—Won the support of Oregon residents, most of whom don't appear to mind toting their bottles and cans back to the grocery for refunds.

How much the law has reduced litter and how much it has cost the industry are disputed in the surveys.

Total litter along Oregon roadsides has declined by between 10.6 per cent and 35 per cent, depending on which study you read. Litter related to beverages only has been reduced by between 66 and 92 per cent, depending on the study.

Contrary to the alarming predictions of four years ago, the beverage industry has not been driven out of Oregon by the bottle law. One small contract canning firm folded but bottle bill supporters attribute the firm's demise to other factors.

The rest of the industry remains intact, although about eight small soft drink bottlers have sold out to larger firms, blaming the bottle law for their inability to continue in business.

Estimates of economic impact of the bottle bill on the Oregon beverage industry ranged from a gain of $4 million during the first year to a loss of $6.9 million to $8.6 million, again depending on who was doing the estimating.

The $4 million gain figure came from two business professors at Oregon State University who credited the bottle bill with reducing the operating costs of brewers and soft drink bottlers by nearly $10.2 million. They offset that gain against costs to the industry to arrive at the $4 million net gain to the industry.

Charles M. Gudger and Jack C. Bailes, the professors, acknowledged in their study that the bottle bill reduced sales and profits of bottle and can manufacturers and added to the operating costs of retailers and distributors.

State Rep. Nancie Fadeley, a bottle law booster recently back from Nevada, said she found its legislature "full of misinformation" she blamed on the beverage industry. She said people in other states are led to believe Oregonians no longer drink beer.

"Contrary to the dire predictions of the bottle bill's opponents," she said, "beer and soda pop are still being consumed, and in increasing volumes."

Boosters of the bill are also likely to note that even ADS found Oregon residents favor the bottle law. An ADS survey a year after it took effect said: "Of those interviewed in September 1973, 91 per cent were in favor of the law and only 5 per cent disapproved."

The industry, meanwhile, has money to publicize its opposing views. The Washington, D.C. based Can Manufacturers Institute has hired a public relations firm and a lawyer to help lobby against bottle bills nationwide.

George Wagner, the institute's lawyer, said that in most states lobbying against the bottle bill is handled by local people. But he added: ".. if and when they need information or assistance from people outside their states, some of the national associations will become involved."

Those associations include the Can Manufacturers Institute, the U.S. Brewers Association, the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute and some retail food store organizations, Wagner said.

So the battle for the hearts and minds of state legislators goes on. Even in Oregon, there is one skirmish left — over legislation that would expand the bottle bill to apply to wine bottles and even food containers.

That bill is not given much chance of passage. But then that's what everyone said about the original bottle bill in 1971.

Where have all the (wild) flowers gone?

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Now, man's shadow falls upon the wild flowers.

In the 50 states, nearly 3,200 kinds of native higher plants are endangered, threatened or recently extinct, over 14 per cent of the nation's floral heritage.

That's the sum of a report to Congress by the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Natural History.

About a third of the plants on the critical or dead list are on the islands of Hawaii — nearly 30 per cent of that state's native flora.

The rest are isolated in small inland islands of the continental United States, locked in by quirks of nature, while man's heavy feet and his penchant for precious blooms are not locked out.

One such island is southern Illinois, short of where the glaciers that wiped out thousands of plants stopped their southern invasion. They call it "the other Illinois" because it is more like the southern coastal states than it is the cornbelt and industry to the north. They grow cotton there. And the bald cypress endures.

There is a flower that grows in southern Illinois, called French's shooting star. It is a small plant, nestling under sandstone ledges, pretty little pink flowers looping out of the green heart, accustomed over the centuries to the shadows of crack and crevice. Its existence is threatened.

The common shooting star, a larger cousin, grows nearby, in the sunlight, sometimes only feet away from its fragile relative. It grows in many places and in proliferation.

Yet the delicate flowers of French's are seen only in the cave-like recesses of this part of Illinois and similar habitats in Arkansas and Kentucky. Something happened to it long ago to limit its living capabilities to these conditions. It even has a different number of chromosomes from the common shooting star.

"It's in the primrose family," explains Dr. Robert A. DeFillips, coordinator of the Smithsonian study. "It has a nice little pink flower and people collect it."

The road to extinction is paved with ignorance, avarice, and sometimes only the conflict between man's domesticated useful world and the not-so-useful world of the wild flower. A field is plowed to grow tomatoes in Florida and wild plants die. Collectors dig up delicate orchids and bizarre cacti and the world of the wild is diminished.

The Smithsonian is recommending that these special areas where plants live in the wild be preserved, and urging that the thriving business of hunting and selling orchids and cacti be curtailed.

It is hard to believe, but some people are willing to pay up to $300 for some rare species of cactus. A more common price is $25, and they are dug up and shipped by the truckloads, threatening their survival. The very people who treasure these remarkable creations of nature are helping decimate them.

To aid efforts of preservation, the Smithsonian intends to back up its list with maps, locating the small islands of living plants. It even does that with some trepidation. "We hesitate to publish maps," explains DeFillips, "because while it alerts people to the fact that plants are endangered in a given area, it also flags them to certain other people who might hunt them out. Many plants die, even when they are uprooted with care. Roots are broken and in some permit the entry of fungal infections."

In Great Britain where conservationists have long ago sought out endangered species of plant life and earmarked them for protection, location maps are actually locked away in a safe.

The Smithsonian study, aided by state studies, shows a number of things about green America. For instance, California, Texas, Florida and to some extent the Appalachian Mountains have the greatest number of native plants of the restricted and rare variety. Also, in four states — Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana — DeFillips says very little is known about local flora and there is much survey work to be done.

Yet those four states have some of the richest vegetation in the United States. Georgia was home for the Franklinia Alatamahia, which was first recorded in 1790, and was last seen in the wild in 1803. It grew along the Altamaha River, a member of the Camellia family, with fragrant white flowers and dark green leaves. Extinct in the wild, it is preserved by horticulturists. In fact, three of the shrubs grow in front of the Smithsonian's natural history building on Constitution Avenue in Washington.

Again, its own beauty was the reason for its demise. It was overcollected to grace the gardens of early America as far north as Philadelphia. Today it graces a U.S. postage stamp.

The Smithsonian lists contain the names of 20 species of orchid and large numbers of cacti. These are the most prominent of the plants falling before the shovels of collectors. They are more than an American heritage. They are a world heritage.

Cacti, for instance, grow only on this hemisphere, in the deserts of the West, Mexico and South America. There are other deserts of the world. But no other cacti. In Africa, nature mimicked the cactus, creating succulent plants that look just like them. But they are members of the spurge family, descended oddly from the same line that brought forth the poinsettia.

It is not an idle concern either. Each plant, like each living creature, represents a certain collection of genes, devised by evolution in an attempt to answer the severe questions asked by nature. In a sense, every living thing is an on-going experiment.

All together, they represent the pool of genes that belong to earth.

As S. Dillon Ripley, secretary of the Smithsonian, observes: "All animals are dependent on plants for food and survival.

DOWNTOWN REDEVELOPMENT

Merchants critical of city's mall stance

By ED PRATHER
P-B Staff Writer

Downtown Pomona businessmen are critical of the city's apparent decision to redirect development efforts away from the city's core area.

They remain hopeful that the downtown area can be put back on its feet in the future.

While conceding that immediate redevelopment of the Pomona Mall is doubtful, business leaders in downtown stated that the city should continue efforts to promote downtown development, along with redevelopment efforts elsewhere in the city.

"The city should give its attention to all areas of the city, not just one. What we need now is more cooperation from the city, the Chamber of Commerce, the public and everyone else," said Jack Booth, a Pomona real estate broker and a longtime booster of the Mall.

Booth said the city should promote development of the Mall by tearing down the older vacant structures and blacktopping the property, making it more attractive to potential investors.

He was critical of the city's public disclosure of information not in the best interest of the downtown business area, stating that such publicity only compounds the problems in attracting new developers.

Booth revealed that a developer is interested in the first two blocks of Pomona Mall East, although no details are available.

It apparently is the same developer who prompted Wayne Book, president of the Central Business District, to exude optimism over the Mall's future.

"I think we have some ideas that can create some real enthusiasm in the community," he said.

Book explained that although the details could not be made public at this time, he was hopeful that some public announcement would be made within a few weeks.

"I'm optimistic and I think a lot of other people are too," said Book.

Perhaps the most optimistic of all is John P. Evans, owner of a clothing store on Pomona Mall West, one of the most successful businesses on the Mall and in the city.

Despite adverse opinion of the recently released independent study of redevelopment and the mall, Evans believes that Pomona Mall can and will become a viable regional retail center again.

He bases that optimism on the "bargain" that downtown Pomona land values present. He believes that a major developer, at some point, will step in and buy most of the Mall.

Evans said that he is not against the city extending redevelopment efforts to other parts of the community, but that efforts to revitalize downtown should continue.

He urged city officials to change their attitudes toward developers and cooperate with them to the fullest extent.

Evans complained that many potential developers have been driven out of Pomona, along with existing businesses, by the tangle of requirements forced on them by the city.

"Word has gotten around in the financial community to stay away from Pomona, they're too difficult," said Evans.

"It is vital that the enthusiasm which any retailer has to have, be matched at least equally by government officials. Downtown Pomona has nowhere to go except up," he said.

Evans admits his optimism is not universal, illustrated by the fact that two more businesses, J. C. Penney and Wellins Jewelry, will be leaving the Mall by summer.

He cites his own store, Buffums' and several other healthy businesses, however, as proof that people are still interested in coming to downtown Pomona.

"We've had shortsighted officials and store owners. There wasn't as much cooperation as there should have been in the past. You can't blame the Mall's problems on any one group. But if we do all pull together, in the same direction, we can bring downtown back," he said.

George Sinclair, owner of Rod, Gun and Hobby on the mall, agreed that people would have to work together to improve conditions downtown.

"If people had worked together six or seven years ago we could have averted what we have today," he said.

While his own business has been "stable," Sinclair indicated his belief that it will take a massive effort on a major developer's part to bring the mall back to health, because there are too few successful businessmen left now to do it on their own.

"At this point, I can't possibly be optimistic. But I intend to stay here, I'm not giving up," he said.

Bonita district initiates crackdown to return truant pupils to the classroom

Bonita Unified School District is implementing a plan to eliminate truancy in cooperation with the La Verne Police Department and the San Dimas sheriff's office.

Howard Wigell, assistant superintendent, said the program is called "Operation Increased Attendance." It is similar to those recently adopted by other area districts.

Enforcement officers from the two communities will be stopping youths between 6 and 18 found on the streets during school hours. If they can give a reasonable explanation or proof for their absence from school they will be released. If not, they will be transported to an office in the San Dimas Chamber of Commerce building or their assigned school.

An office coordinator from the school district will contact district attendance and welfare officers and will then transport the students to their proper school. Counseling conferences will be arranged between school authorities and the parents and student to see why the student has been out of school.

The Bonita district is receiving funds from the Pomona Valley Juvenile Diversion Project for the cost of the receiving center coordinator. The City of San Dimas is providing office space without charge to the schools.

A part of the program will be a regular patroling of Bonelli Park and Puddingstone Dam area.

Form group to probe override defeat

May trim high school credits to cut costs

Recommendations that credits required for high school graduation be dropped from 220 to 200 will be considered by the Chaffey school board at a Monday meeting.

Site of the 7 p.m. meeting is the district board room at 211 W. 5th St., Ontario.

The recommendation calls for a 10-hour reduction in English semester hours (20 instead of 30) and a 10-hour reduction in social studies (20 instead of 30) as initially recommended by the district curriculum steering committee.

Cuts in program are necessary to bring into balance budgets for coming years in light of the failure of the district's March 4 tax override proposal. A committee is being formed to study why the override failed.

The recommendation calls for a reduction of 10 semester hours (down from 220 to 210) for the Class of 1976, and the dropping of an additional 10 semester hours (down to 200) for Class of 1977.

Initial goal of the tax override study committee is to enlist 150 members from all geographical sections of the sprawling school district. It administers high schools in Ontario, Montclair, Upland and Alta Loma.

A committee spokesman said the group wanted to look into such things as subjects taught in the schools, the quality of teaching, teaching loads, vocational training, administrative loads and costs, physical facilities, library, music, sports needs and activities, costs of quality education and possible means of cutting costs and maintaining quality education.

Anyone in the district desiring to join the committee may mail a card with name, address asd telephone number to Citizens Committee for Education, P. O. Box 855, Ontario 91761.

City councilmen to study permanent closure of Monroe Street intersection

Permanent closure of Monroe Street at Orange Grove Avenue in Pomona once again will be considered by Pomona City Council Monday.

Monroe has been closed on a temporary basis since last fall when residents petitioned the city seeking relief from excessive traffic.

Since the street was closed, however, a continuing controversy over the closure has swirled among residents and businessmen in the area.

An environmental impact report on the closure will be among the reports received by the council for consideration.

Other agenda items for the 8 p.m. meeting include a report from Pomona Development Company concerning the United California Bank building proposed for the northwest corner of Garey Avenue and Mission Boulevard downtown.

The proposed development, the sole remaining redevelopment project in the city's two original redevelopment areas, has been significantly reduced in scale from six stories to three, possibly less. Whether the developer is prepared to meet a $3 million development committee also is in doubt.

City Council is also expected to approve the city's participation in the Pomona School District's "Operation Increased Attendance," an anti-truancy program. A recommendation to lengthen curfew hours for juveniles also will be heard.

Skateboard marathon will aid muscular dystrophy

Students at Walnut High School will attempt April 4-6 to establish a skateboard record.

Their three-day marathon, to be held in the school gym, is being planned to benefit Muscular Dystrophy.

Student Carol Day said 15 boys will skate, five at a time, in 2-hour spans beginning at 5 p.m. April 4 and ending at 5 p.m. April 6.

The idea was conceived by junior Mark Martinez and senior Jack Bedwell, a new student at Walnut.

Miss Day said the students decided on the idea when they learned there apparently is no skateboard record. They wanted a cause, she said, so they picked Muscular Dystrophy.

They are attempting to sign up sponsors for each of the 15 participants, and to get commercial food handlers to donate food for the three-day event.

Admission to the skateboard marathon will be free.

A MINIATURE AIRPORT

Bonnie McCloskey, chief tour guide at Ontario International Airport, exhibits one of the displays made by fifth graders at Bon View School in Ontario after they toured the local airport.

By L. T. ROGERS
Asst. City Editor

All those who visit the Ontario International Airport don't come to fly.

Many are school children, scouts and students in college and adult school aviation classes wanting to learn more about aviation.

To insure these visitors get the maximum benefit from their brief time at the airport, eight tour guides are employed to point out and discuss the main items of interest.

Popularity of the airport tours is seen in the 531 groups who visited last year. These included 14,154 children and 2,237 adults.

School groups come from as far away as Victorville, Elsinore, Beaumont and East Los Angeles. They mainly include children in grades one through six.

Most adults are enrolled in aviation oriented classes at San Bernardino Valley College, Mt. San Jacinto College and the Mark Keppel Adult School in Alhambra. Many are studying to be airline stewards or stewardesses.

Such youth groups as Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Cub Scouts, Explorers, Brownies and Blue Birds schedule tours during January and February when the field of transportation is emphasized.

School groups usually are taken on an airport tour aboard their own buses. Children are shown the control tower, runways, landing approach lights, Air National Guard, fire station and such airport tenants as Lockheed Aircraft Service and Wells Aviation Service.

Visitors also are taken into the terminal building where they pass through the passenger screening area. This includes the magnometer which detects metals on boarding passengers and suitcases and the newly installed x-ray machines where operators can view property inside luggage.

On occasion when a commercial plane is waiting for passenger to board, children are permitted to climb aboard the giant planes and sit in the passenger seats.

"This is always a big thrill since for many this is the first time they have ever been in an airplane," said Mrs. Bonnie McCloskey, chief tour guide.

"And should a pilot or stewardess be aboard, they will chat with the children about the plane, where it's going, and how long it will take to get there."

Adults are permitted to climb up a long flight of stairs into the glass enclosed operations room atop the control tower, visit the Federal Aviation Administration's flight service station, and visit various airline offices to view electronic equipment used in booking flights and passengers.

One of the most unusual murals received is heavy construction paper cut to resembly mosaic tile. These pieces form the outline of the tower, terminal building and windsock.

The tour guides were also impressed with a large display made of plywood and cardboard by a special study group of Bon View School's fifth grade class. The Ontario children visited the airport last month and completed the display last week.

On the plybcard base, it has plastic airplanes, two runways, the Wells Aviation Service building, control tower and passenger building.

This also will be placed where it can be viewed by the thousands of travelers who do come to the airport each month to fly.

Opinion

Paper avalanche no 'paper tiger'

It is estimated the federal government could save $2 billion to $9 billion a year without loss of efficiency by adopting less expensive ways of doing things. In considerable measure, this means cutting paperwork which costs the government and public almost $26 billion a year.

Experts say paper flowing into federal agencies each year fills 4.5 million cubic feet of space. Federal paperwork management adds up to $8 billion annually. The federal bureaucracy alone generates more than two billion pieces of paper every 12 months. This figures out at 10 forms to be filled out each year for every man, woman and child in the United States.

The savings estimate above does not include state, county and city governments nor figure in the cost of reporting by private companies and individuals.

Leaving out millions of hours spent on IRS tax forms, the President's Office of Management and the Budget estimates individuals and business firms spend 130.5 million manhours per year filling out federal report forms. This is equivalent to fulltime employment for 78,000 persons.

In the years since 1967, American businesses have borne a 50 per cent increase in government reporting.

With all this paperwork, there is a paucity of information on essential economic and social matters.

Many reports are not read and much of the material called for is filed away, never to get to where it could be used. Ironically, despite the mountains of material, a great deal of the information collected is wrong or much of what is needed is not asked for, or is asked for in an unusuable form.

In many cases, there is no office to take advantage of what is collected. Phillip S. Hughes, Assistant Comptroller General of the United States, says that "during a study of data collection in the energy area, we found . . . no central agency in the government responsible for directing or coordinating the collection of energy data, nor . . . any agency whose principal responsibility . . . (was) the analysis of energy data, as such. Yet . . . (as of) March, 1973, fifteen major federal agencies were circulating 145 energy-related questionnaires to the states and the private sector. These questionnaires require 11 million responses."

It was not until a year and a half later that the Federal Energy Administration announced the creation of a National Energy Information Center.

Duplication between federal agencies and between Washington and state governments is the order of the day. There is tremendous overlap, for example, in the reporting requirements of federal and state tax collection offices. A multitude of small and large businesses must fill out a variety of state and federal forms on the same subject matter.

A Federal Report Act was created almost 33 years ago in an effort to lessen paperwork. The Budget Bureau, later OMB, was given the cleanup job. OMB officials report little progress.

In 1968, at the request of the Budget Bureau, an interagency task force set out to cut grant-in-aid processing time. This effort yielded a remarkable 43 per cent average reduction in workdays required in the 10 agencies concerned. OMB believes this saving has now largely evaporated, with agencies back to their old sloppy habits.

There's also evidence paperwork can be controlled if constant pressure is applied. When its feet were put to the fire, the Labor Department discovered reports it had required from a million small businessmen added nothing.

Plans to assassinate ringleaders in drug smuggling drafted, rejected

WASHINGTON — A bizarre scheme to combat drug smuggling by assassinating the international ringleaders was drafted but rejected at secret, inter-agency meetings during the Nixon years. Under the proposal, the Central Intelligence Agency would have arranged the assassinations in such smuggling centers as Burma, France, Lebanon and Turkey.

One participant in the planning sessions, none other than White House plumber G. Gordon Liddy, was so taken by the assassination idea that he recommended going ahead with it not only overseas but in the United States.

These are the recollections of sources with intimate knowledge of the secret meetings, which began in 1969. Attending were representatives of the State, Treasury and Justice Departments, the CIA and federal drug agencies.

This inter-agency working group rejected out of hand Liddy's plan to murder drug traffickers in the United States, our sources say.

One member of the group remembers, incidentally, that they were disconcerted by Liddy's habit of packing a gun at the meetings.

But contingency plans were prepared to assassinate international narcotics overlords in their faraway lairs. Under one plan that reached the drafting stage, the CIA was supposed to form an assassination squad complete with "sterile" helicopters and weapons that couldn't be traced.

This squad was going to swoop down on opium traffickers in Burma's northern mountains, slaughter them, destroy the opium and flee.

In the end, all the assassination plans were scrapped. But the discussions continued on other desperate measures. In April, 1971, for example, a secret meeting was held in Bangkok attended by foreign servce officers, military brass and U.S. narcotics agents from Hong Kong, Honolulu, Manila, Phnom Penh, Rangoon, Saigon and Vientiane.

Under State Department auspices, they discussed plans to send criminals into the smuggling areas to destroy opium labs, to bribe foreign officials to enforce the drug laws more strictly and to flood the market with harmless heroin substitutes, according to the secret minutes.

The planning at the lower levels was superseded eventually by higher-level, inter-agency meetings. On Sept. 7, 1971, President Nixon set up the Cabinet Committee on International Narcotics Control.

Headed by Secretary of State William Rogers, it included the heads of the Defense, Justice and Treasury Departments, CIA and U.S. Mission to the United Nations.

As far as we can determine, all thought of the CIA's Mission Impossible assassination teams had been dropped by the time the Rogers unit was formed.

ENDANGERED SPECIES ACTS

During the past century, predatory men have wiped out approximately 10 per cent of all known animal species. Another 10 per cent are close to extinction.

To protect our wildlife, Congress finally pushed through the Endangered Species Act in 1973. This gave the government broad, sweeping powers to stop the slaughter of the vanishing species.

Yet today, the endangered animals are in as much peril as they ever have been. The reason is that the act has been entrusted to balking bureaucrats to administer.

The new Endangered Species Office was placed under the jurisdiction of the Fish and Wildlife Service, which has a close relationship with the hunting-fishing lobby. Our sources report that the Fish and Wildlife bureaucrats are obstructing the experts who were brought in to protect the disappearing wildlife.

The main function of these experts is to determine which animals should be listed as endangered, thereby bringing them under government protection. But the experts keep tripping over the bureaucratic red tape.

THE PUBLIC FORUM

Not for an outsider

In Tuesday's Progress-Bulletin you printed a letter criticizing the Pomona Police Department, signed by Mr. E. V. Allen of La Verne.

I have said for a long time that this is one of Pomona's problems — too many outsiders trying to tell us how to run our business!

Perhaps Mr. Allen's concern could have been answered with a telephone call. Facts in the story bear out the actions of the police.

Perhaps Mr. Allen would best confine his concern to his own community — that of lovely downtown La Verne!

Richard C. Brownell

Some can read, write

Not too many high school gradutes these days seem to get credit for even being able to read and write, thus it is refreshing to learn that there are a good number who obviously can.

In fact there are many who excel in the English language and they're being given special recognition by the State University and Colleges system, according to Chancellor Glen S. Dumke.

Successful passage by high school students of a unique English testing program devised by the State University and Colleges system permits skilled youngsters to move directly into advanced academic coursework and gives them credit for two completed courses in college freshman English. In the two years the exam has been given nearly a third of those tested have passed it, gone on into advanced work and averaged grades of "b" or higher at the college level.

As Chancellor Dumke notes much attention has been focused lately on poorly prepared students and the growth of "dumbbell Englsih" courses in our colleges. Now he says it's time to recognize that at the other end of the scale there are many others who are demonstrably skilled.

While all this may seem a strange way to evaluate accomplishment in such a fundamental skill as reading and writing, it is welcome news that those youngsters who do achieve are being recognized in a meaningful way for their effort.

Just in jest

I am aware that when the shoe is on the other foot and pinching a bit, it is difficult to refrain from complaining. So I am not too surprised at the hue and cry now being raised about our sitting idly by and permitting foreigners to obtain control of key U.S. industries. But why put ourselves in the embarrassing position of being likened to the pot that is calling the kettle black? Let's quit complaining, call a spade a spade and, using the fine art of rationalization, admit that so far as we are concerned turnabout is never fair play. — The fact that U.S. firms have investments worth in excess of $120 billion in foreign countries is naturally just good business and a definite economic aid to underprivileged nations. But when $20 billion Middle East oil dollars and Japanese industrial dollars are suddenly invested in U.S. business and industry — well, as anyone can easily see, that immediately becomes a threat to our national security, not to mention our manifest destiny.

Biblical sports: an eye for an eye

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — A man pays $7 to see a hockey game today and what he purchases is a war. The only difference between the players and soldiers is they don't wear bandoleers on ice. Some of the game's survivors have grown rich doing things outlawed in Geneva 50 years ago. Blood flows, bones break, eyes are blackened, flesh rips. Some time after the third quarter, they should evacuate the wounded by helicopter.

This is sport?

It is only if they have begun measuring ability by intimidation. What goes on in America's arenas today must be defined as mayhem. If it continues unpoliced, the summary scores of the future may read: "runs, hits, errors, fractures, transfusions and fatalities." Grantland Rice, bless him, must be weeping in that great pressbox in the sky.

Assuredly, hockey is the offensive champion of the matter. Last year a NHL sport named Dave Forbes stuck his stick in an opponent's eye, provoking lengthy loss of vision, not to mention 30 stitches of repair. No doubt worried about what the kids in the audience might think, old Dave explained his actions after being indicted for assault as "aggressive brotherhood.

"People don't understand what goes on out there," old Dave assured the children. "Players have mutual respect for each other."

Unfortunately, such respect is not confined to hockey. Football is organized destruction, professional basketball has become an aggregate of mercenary Huns, auto racing is the sport to see if one enjoys the odor of roasting hair. Baseball used to be the national pastime, now save an occasional field rumble ("Lemme lay the lumber on him," as they say) it has given way to the Roller Derby. One must pause here to describe the Roller Derby adequately: It is commercial guerrilla activity.

Dr. Paul Weiss, a Catholic University academic who has written a volume on the philosophy of sport, says pastimes like poetry were invented out of virtuous need but like poetry, have been vulgarized. He understates it.

The other evening, the middleweight boxing champion of the galaxy, a chap named Roberto Duran, knocked an opponent unconscious for half an hour, then boasted: "If I had been in normal shape, he would have gone to the morgue instead of the hospital." Vulgerization? Watching a boxing match is often the same as watching someone kick his dog.

To be sure, there are those who'd buy season tickets to dog kicking. Some fans in the realm enjoy anything with stench, so long as there are odds. If a tiger kills a man, as Shaw said it's terrible, but if a man kills a tiger it's sport. It is these fans, as much as anything else, who demand the worst from athletes. They are morbid voyeurs, some of them without whose support sport owners and participants would be drudging away at time-clock jobs.

This shame is not confined to America, of course. (Many nations stoop as low for recreation — a bull fight, to illustrate, is as competitive as Christians vs. Lions and once every decade, some boob is gored and so gives testimony to the ticket sellers' insistence of pavilion suspense.) Yet no other people but we have so institutionalized broken teeth as a sacrifice to manhood. Kids as young as eight in this sovereignty are taught to demolish the guy in the different color jersey. By the time they weigh 250 pounds many of them are walking weapons.

Still the sports' brutality goes on, growing. Athletic stitches have become a mark of achievement like kill counts on an F-105. Philosopher Weiss has said repeatedly that it is socially as well as physically destructive and besides, some of it is illegal. The same suggestion is for the industry to get a grip on its excess, gate receipts or no, or the greater society, finally sickened to the limit, will do it more harshly. Yet the industry does not listen because it is too busy explaining, "tut, tut, not to worry, good clean fun, mutual respect, rough but reasonable."

In fact, sports do police their own. And the way they do it is biblical: eye-for-eye, or violence to the violators. It's not very effective but it's profitable. And that, after all, is now the real name of the games.

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions—fast. It costs you nothing. Call Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. or write Heartline, 8514 North Main St., Dayton, Ohio, 45415. Remember, Heartline pays for all calls on its toll-free number . . . 800-543-2450.

Heartline: I will receive close to $4,000.00 in back sick pay, going back to 1967. Will this count against the $2520.00 allowed under social security?

Answer: No, sick pay from past years through a company plan would not count against your allowable $2520.00.

Heartline: Will the new pension law make my company pay me more? I'm only getting $42.00 per month. —W.O.

Answer: No, the new law which goes into effect Jan. 1, 1976 sets no minimum amount.

Heartline: My husband is going to be admitted to a VA hospital, will they reduce our pension because of that? —R.O.

Answer: No, not if you were residing in same household before admittance to hospital.

Heartline: I am moving to Hawaii. Is Heartline there also? —M.S.

Answer: Our phone service is only in the 48 continental United States. However, you can write us anytime.

Heartline: Will Medicare pay for insulin or insulin needles? — Mrs. P.K.

Answer: No.

The perfect husband? $, dad, lover, human

What is a husband? No. 1, a breadwinner. No. 2, a father. No. 3, a husband. And No. 4, a human being in his own right. In that order. Or such is what a group of Long Island housewives told the surveytakers in a study of their attitudes about their matrimonial mates.

YOU KNOW that little lizard called the chameleon? How do you suppose it stores its tongue? A chameleon only seven inches long has been seen to stick out its tongue 12 inches farther than its body length.

IN THAT MATTER of which words have more than four pronouns in succession, will you accept the proper noun Hershey with five? He, her, hers, she, he.

BASEBALL

Q. "What pro baseball player played with the most major league teams?"

A. Credit Bobo Newsom with that distinction. Between 1929 and 1953, he was with Brooklyn, Chicago Clubs, St. Louis Browns, Washington Senators, Boston Red Sox, Detroit Tigers, New York Yankees, New York Giants and Philadelphia Athletics.

PERSONALITY tests of 1,200 grownups at the University of Minnesota indicate that especially tall women tend to lack self-confidence. Or did you surmise as much? But those tests proved something else, too. Contrary to popular belief, particularly short men do not generally feel inferior.

LIFE EXPECTANCY

Most animals are said to have a life expectancy six times as long as their physical growth period. Or such be the claim of the science boys, at any rate. No doubt they mean barring ailments and accidents. Are most humans fully grown by age 18? Accordingly, if so, they should live to be 108.

IF THERE were such a thing as an average state in these United States, that state would contain about 5,000 square miles of land in the Arctic where the ground is frozen year round. Said state also would have about 150 miles of coastline. And its population would run approximately 3.5 million people.

BRIDES in early New England customarily chose the text of the sermons at their weddings. A historian reports the most popular was: "Two are better than one, because they have a good reward for their labor. For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow, but woe to him that is alone when he taileth, for he hath not another to help him up."

What people say

Old Faithful geyser in Yellowstone National Park spurts near-boiling water 120 to 170 feet in the air, gushing an average of once every 67 minutes.

A sea otter's fur grows so fine and thick that the animal can swim for days without getting its skin wet.

ANN LANDERS

Religion or no; parents are being punitive in daughter's wedding row

Dear Ann Landers: You really blew it on your advice to the Protestant parents who wrote to say they didn't think they could take another Catholic wedding. Their older daughter married into the church and now their second daughter had announced that she was going to do the same.

Being Jewish, how could you possibly know what it's like for Anglican parents to stand and watch their children take vows in a church whose teachings they do not believe? A wedding isn't just a ceremony. It's a promise to accept a certain way of life.

This is more than a matter of pride. You must be aware of the chemical effects on the body when behavior goes against one's inherent beliefs. So please don't give advice like that. You haven't been through it. — We Have.

Dear W.H. The individuals who are being married take the vows. The parents are merely witnesses. I say if the children made the decision to be married in the Catholic church, you should be willing to accept that decision and respect their right to choose the kind of life they want for themselves.

It is my personal opinion that parents who refuse to attend the wedding of a child who marries out of their faith are being extremely punitive and pathetically short-sighted.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 67, a fairly intelligent woman, with a son who is physically handicapped. Our daughter received a splendid education, married well and lives 600 miles from here. My health, plus my son who needs care, make traveling impossible. Because my daughter has four small children, she is unable to get away and we see each other very infrequently.

I will be frank about the problem because I need a straight answer. After ten years of dire deprivation, our daughter finally agreed to send me a certain amount of money every month. A good part of it is "returned" in the form of birthday and Christmas gifts for her, her husband and the four children.

These past two years I have been strapped financially and I need every cent. This daughter who is supposed to be so brilliant buys us useless and costly gifts which we hate to see come through the door. If only she would send us the money instead.

For Christmas she sent me a pantsuit (which I will never wear) and a garish, rhinestone necklace like "ladies of the evening" used to wear 25 years ago.

What can be done about such waste? — Depressed In Nashville

Dear Nash: Write your daughter a letter. Tell her you appreciate her thoughtfulness but you do not need gifts, you need cash. Explain, too, that you will be sending the children birthday letters in a box of homemade cookies from now on and you hope they will enjoy them. For Christmas, knit mittens for the children and scarfs for ther adults.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has a low sperm count. Does this mean we can't have any children? My mother says yes, and that we should stop trying and begin to look into adoption. What do you say? — Eager To Be Parents

Dear Eager: Mnay men with low sperm counts have fathered children. You and your husband should go to a fertility clinic for instruction. Many couples who were depressed because they were unable to have children have been helped by these professionals. Your gynecologist can guide you.

It's not always easy to recognize love, especially the first time around. Acquaint yourself with the guidelines. Read Ann Landers's booklet, "Love or Sex and How To Tell the Difference." For a copy, mail 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120.

ERMA BOMBECK

Blame children on cement mixer

Janet, a bride of several months, said to me the other night, "You had your children during the awkward age, didn't you?"

"What age is that?" I asked.

"Too late for prudence and too early for the pill."

"Look Janet, if I've said it once, I've said it a thousand times, the pill is grossly overrated. Statistics will show there are some situations where the pill is totally ineffective and there is nothing in this world that will change it. A woman is flirting with imminent motherhood if she:

1. Lets her Blue Cross lapse
2. Buys one water ski
3. Converts her maternity clothes into a camper
4. Is named executive director of Zero Population
5. Reaches her insurance chart weight
6. Buys a cement mixer."

"Hold it!" said Janet. "What does a cement mixer have to do with conceiving a child?"

"You little naive fool," I said, "I got a letter just last week from a woman in Scandia, Minn., who had been childless for several years when they decided to buy some land and build their own home. They acquired a cement mixer from a bachelor uncle and started to lay the blocks. The footers weren't even finished when she delivered her first child.

"Their next project was a barn. Again she grabbed the shovel and started to run the mixer when another child arrived. Tempting the gods once more, she resumed her mixing to pour the floor when once again she bore a child.

"They began to suspect the mixer was just that but had to be sure. They loaned it to neighbors, childless for seven years, who needed a sidewalk around their house. She became pregnant before the concrete dried. In fact, the neighbor on the next farm also became pregnant with her eighth child which they blamed on southerly winds.

"The following January when their garage burned to the ground, they again got out the cement mixer and she again became an expectant mother."

"Then you are telling me that the pill is useless against something like a cement mixer?"

"I am telling you after six children they did what they had to do."

"Got rid of the cement mixer?" said Janet excitedly.

"No, had its electrical cord tied. Doesn't your generation know anything?"

DR. FRANK MILLER

Cats, dogs require different nutrition

DEAR DR. MILLER: When you're feeding a really good canned dog food to your dog anyway and all your pets like it, is there any reason for bothering to buy cat food besides? —T.K.

DEAR T.K.: Not unless you have cats. If you do, then a balanced cat food is a good idea because nutritional requirements for cats and dogs are not the same. For example, cats need almost four times as much protein in their diet as do dogs.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Have you ever heard — well, I know you haven't but I'm going to ask you anyway — of a cat that's only clumsy on Sundays? Sunday mornings? So help me, it's the truth. My Monique is a normally graceful cat six days of the week, but those Sunday mornings, it's incredible. She knocks things off of shelves; in fact she's ruined half of my china cat collection. I could sympatnize with her if she were clumsy every day of the week, but early Sunday morning? It's too confusing. —E.P.

DEAR E.P.: Always on Sunday? Hmm. . . Monique's mysterious malady may come from mundane hunger pains. Presuming Sunday is your sleep-in morning, and Monique's morning meal is therefore postponed, consider the mystery solved. Your options are to feed her on time, Sunday morning included, or secure any item which won't bounce, so she can't accidentally knock it to the floor.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My problem? I had a barking dog. Everybody said get another dog for your first dog, so he won't be lonesome. Now what's my problem? I've got two barking dogs. I keep my dogs confined so they won't run around and bother the neighbors. Do the neighbors appreciate it? No. They complain because I have barking dogs. Sometimes you can't win — can I? —H.C.

DEAR H.C.: Techniques for "de-barking" dogs range from anti-bark collars (electronic collars which prdouce a mild(?) electric shock every time the dog barks) to soundproofed dog runs, to surgical silencing of the vocal cords. However, the best, but seldom the simplest, system for silencing your dogs most of the time is to train them not to bark for the fun of it, or to relieve boredom, but only when there's something really worth barking at. This involves considerable on-the-job training as well as providing plenty of exercise and companionship for your canines. The results — better canine companions for you and more quiet for your neighbors — justify the time spent.

LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Increase muscles for better health

DEAR DR. LAMB — I saw your column suggesting to a woman that she should start a program to increase her muscles in order to lose weight. That's a new idea to me. Would you explain a little more just how one goes about improving their muscles? What kind of exercises and how often does it take? I'm interested in losing weight, but I sure don't want to develop big bulging muscles. It might look all right on a man but not on a woman.

DEAR READER — Women don't have to develop big bulging muscles to do something about muscle building to control their body weight. In fact when done properly it helps most women look a lot firmer and trimmer.

The problem with most exercise programs to control weight is that they are designed to run or burn off calories and that takes a lot of continuous effort.

The basic principle of weight training is to lift a load that is light enough that you can lift it three times in succession without difficulty. When you get so you can lift it 12 times in a row without trouble then you should increase the load. You don't need to strain and grunt or produce hernias.

And, here is the best part, you don't need to have a long daily exercise program. If you lift a weight three to 12 times, three days a week (with one day of rest between the exercise days) you will grow muscle mass faster than if you try to lift the same weight more times daily or several times a day. Too frequent exercise actually slows down the development of muscles. They need time to respond to your stimulating them by weight training.

Most of the gymnastic exercises help to build muscle because the muscle is loaded with the body weight. Push-ups and pull-ups are good examples. You can develop a good routine of these so that all of the muscles in your body are put under load for several repetitions.

And, here is another good point. Once you have developed your muscle mass to the optimal level for you, it is possible to maintain the same amount of muscle and strength by doing the exercises only once a week.

Isometric exercises that contract one muscle against the other one also help to build muscle mass. There are differences in opinion as to how much good you get out of them or how much you need to do, but you can get some benefit.

I think it is important to get some good supervision when you first start a muscle strengthening exercise program so that you will be using all the muscles properly without straining yourself. Many of the YMCA and YWCA organizations are equipped to do this for you.

The muscle building program will build energy tissue that will enable your body to use more energy at rest than it does if too much of your body weight is fat. In two people of identical weight, one fat and the other muscular, the muscular person will use more calories at rest and will have more energy.

These exercises don't replace the need for some endurance exercises, particularly the need for walking, but they help in maintaining posture, helping to control obesity and avoiding the middle-aged spread.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on losing weight, send 50 cents and a long self-addressed stamped envelope to the same address and ask for the "Losing weight" booklet.

BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Monday, March 24, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You tend to let things go until the last minute today. This could mean you'll be working until the wee hours to catch up.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A matter that has caused you some mental anguish won't be resolved unless you take a harder line. Be firm. Face up to what has to be done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try not to bring into the act people with goals not in harmony with yours. If you do, something that could be gained will be lost.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful in your commercial dealings. You're likely to make a serious mistake if you act hastily, without checking facts and figures.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Think twice before you reveal your business secrets to anyone. What you tell in confidence will later be broadcast to the wrong ears.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Though you can't do much about it at the moment, give thought to what can be done later to shore up a relationshp with a valuable ally.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You have an influential contact who can now help you further one of your more ambitious aims. Don't be hesitant to call upon this person.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Better results will be obtained now if you de-emphasize your material goal. Concentrate more upon the friendly support of those involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll have to make a choice between doing something for effect to make you look like a good guy or doing that which is practical.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be careful. You may be taken advantage of in a situation where you're dealing in the dark with something material at stake. Get facts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something mutually satisfactory can be worked out now regarding an old obligation to a friend. Talk it over.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't worry now about problems you think may be coming up. Handle what's necessary, for today. Tomorrow will care for itself.

Your Birthday March 24, 1975

Opportunity will come your way this year from very unusual sources. Put your best foot forward careerwise. A job well done will repay with many fringe benefits.

AL ROSSITER JR.

Blame schizophrenia for high fetus deaths

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The offspring of a group of parents in Boston suffering from schizophrenia had fetal and newborn death rates twice as high as that of children of healthy parents.

A study conducted by researchers of the National Institute of Mental Health also found there is an even higher incidence of unexplained deaths among the offspring of schizophrenics.

"It's really a scientific puzzle as to why that might be happening," said Dr. Ronald O. Rieder, who led the work reported in the February issue of Archives of General Psychiatry.

Rieder said in an interview there could be a hereditary link in schizophrenia which may be affecting pregnancies. But the study was not able to prove that. Other possibilities to explain the increased incidence of deaths might be an adverse uterine influence on the fetus related in some way to the mother's illness, or perhaps some type of toxic effect of medication taken by one or both parents.

The report said there also may be other factors involved such as different patterns of smoking, self-care or diet among schizophrenics that might have influenced the outcome of the pregnancy.

Schizophrenia is the most common of the serious mental illnesses and Rieder said earlier studies have shown that about 10 per cent of the children of schizophrenics eventually develop the disease themselves.

The study was part of a larger survey that started in 1959 of the pregnancies and children of 58,600 women. Of 9,280 women studied in Boston, 186 said that either she or her husband or both had been hospitalized in a psychiatric hospital.

An examination of medical records found that 38 mothers and 25 fathers were schizophrenics. They produced 93 offspring, including two sets of twins.

As controls for comparison purposes, the researchers selected a larger group of parents with no mental illness who produced twice as many children. The control group was carefully matched to the schizophrenics for race, age, socioeconomic status and the number of earlier pregnancies.

There were seven deaths of fetuses or newborns among the 93 offspring produced by the schizophrenic parents for a 7.5 per cent death rate. There were also seven deaths among the 186 offspring of the comparison group, for a 3.8 per cent rate.

"When we examine these deaths more closely, the difference becomes even greater," the report said. All seven of the deaths of the schizophrenic group were labeled by a pathologist as having an unknown cause while all but two of the deaths in the control group were thought to have been associated with complications of the pregnancy.

Rieder said he is now examining the records of the surviving children of schizophrenics in the group to see if any abnormalities showed up in periodic examinations. The children are now between 10 and 16 years old.

"Are they abnormal in some way, not grossly abnormal but did they show some sort of abnormality on a psychological exam or a neurological exam when they're early on?" he said.

"We have to compare them with a control group. Any group of children is going to show some kids with abnormalities, but are there some specific groups that may show more?"

Market sluggish at week's end

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) —The stock market drifted through its quietest session in more than eight weeks Friday in a listless atmosphere that seemed to signal growing caution among investors.

The slight declines recorded by all the major indicators extended the market's losing streak to four days.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials declined .94 to 763.06, stretching its loss since last Monday's close to 23.47 points.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was off .22 at 83.39, and the New York Stock Exchange's composite index of more than 1,500 common issues dropped .14 to 44.26.

Losers outnumbered gainers 819 to 540 among the 1,779 issues traded on the Big Board.

The day's turnover of 15.94 million shares was the smallest since Jan. 22, when 15.33 million shares changed hands just a few days before the start of the record-breaking surge in trading of late January and February.

Brokers traced the sluggishness of the session to an evidently spreading feeling that the rally of the past three months might have exhausted itself, possibly leaving prices vulnerable to a long-expected retrenchment.

A couple of injections of seemingly favorable economic news did little to perk the market up.

Weekly Federal Reserve figures on Monday and credit conditions issued after Thursday's close showed a strong jump in the nation's money supply.

And at mid-after noon Friday, the government reported that new orders for durable goods broke out of a stepe five-month slide with an upturn in February.

The Dow, down about 4 points when the durable goods report reached Wall Street, edged up briefly to the plus side shortly afterward, but then tailed off again when the rally attempt drew little support.

Warner Communications was the Bit Board volume leader, rising ¾ to 13¾ on turnover of 784,900 shares.

The company said it had bought two blocks totaling 713,700 shares, and also reported its executive committee had approved the repurchase of up to one million shares in addition to one million authorized in January.

Most major stock groups showed only fractional changes.

Rockwell International, suggject of some bearish comments in a Wall Street Journal article, slipped 1⅞ to 19½.

Bates Manufacturing gained 1⅞ to 17¾. The company reported that its earnings jumped to $7.99 a share last year, against $1.87 in 1973.

RCA was active again, dipping ⅝ to 16⅞ after a 1⅞ gain Thursday, when the company said it was working with auto manufacturers on a device called a microprocessor for possible use in improving gasoline economy.

Among other microprocessor producers, National Semiconductor rose 1 to 30 and Fairchild Camera gained 1⅜ to 35, but Texas Instruments lost ⅞ to 32¾.

Financial Corp. of Santa Barbara slumped 2⅛ to 11¾ in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. California Federal Savings & Loan Association said rumors that it might acquire the organization were unfounded.

Business briefs

ROSEMEAD (AP) — The San Onofre nuclear generating station will be taken out of service for a scheduled refueling of the power plant, Southern California Edison Co. said Thursday.

The plant is expected to be out of operation about seven weeks.

David J. Fogarty, vice president in charge of power supply, said that during the refueling about one-third of the nuclear reactor's fuel assemblies will be replaced with fresh fuel to keep the plant running another 16 months.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Republic Corp., a diversified manufacturer, Wednesday reported earnings of $4.44 million, or 31 cents a share, on sales of $127.04 million for the six months ended Jan. 31.

This compares with $1.84, or 13 cents a share, on sales of $104.3 million for the comparable period of the previous year.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Knudsen Corp., a major Central California dairy food processor and distributor, reported Thursday earnings of $1.19 million, or 51 cents a share, on revenues of $124.24 million for the nine months ended Dec. 31.

This compares with $2.52 million, or $1.10 a share, on revenues of $125.83 million a year earlier.

Mobile home fire reward is offered

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — (BW) — A $2,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of any mobile home arsonist in the country is being offered by Foremost Insurance Co., a leading insurer of mobile homes.

Foremost said "the $2,000 reward is applicable to information leaning to any mobile home arson conviction in the country, whether the home is insured by Foremost, another insurance carrier or uninsured."

Arson, the malicious act of setting fires, has increased tenfold since 1950 in all types of housing. Today, fire has been estimated to have accounted for 30 per cent or more of all building losses, for a total greater than all other costs of violence combined.

Foremost said the mobile home industry experienced a startling increase in fire losses. With the same number of mobile homes insured, Foremost's fire losses increased 29 per cent in 1974. The company suspects that possibly up to one-third of all its fire losses are deliberately set.

In 1973 Foremost paid about 8,000 fire claims, with the average claim amounting to $1,900. In 1974 the figure rose to almost 11,000 fire claims, with the average claim amounting to $2,100, indicating a sharp increase in the frequency and severity of fire claims.

The 1974 increase in fire losses alone might mean the average Foremost policyholder nationwide would have to pay about 14 per cent more for the same insurance coverage.

Foremost's primary interest is to keep rates down by not paying arson-related claims which are unjust to the mobile home insurance industry, its policyholders and the general public.

Foremost has initiated a fire reduction program, including the $2,000 arson conviction reward, in an attempt to hold premium increases to a minimum.

Any concerned citizen who has information which could lead to the conviction of a suspected mobile home arsonist should contact a Foremost arson investigation coordinator. The firm's western contact is: Foremost Western Region, Walnut Creek, Calif., phone 415—934-1400.

All information will be forwarded immediately to the state fire marshal's office. There must be an actual criminal conviction to qualify for a reward. If there is more than one source of information, the reward will be shared.

TORO ACROBATICO — Jose Julio Granada, un matador espanol participando en el primo dia de corridas de toros en la arena de Vista Alegre, en Madrid, observa a su toro hacer un salto mortal.

Noticias de concilios

La primera mujer en la historia va servir como abogado de una ciudad en el valle, sera elegida para ese puesto en La Verne, a comenzar el 1 de Abril.

La nueva abogada es Wynne Furth, quien utiliza su nombre de soltera en su profesion, a pesar de estar casada con Don Brennis, profesor de antropologia en el Colegio Pitzer.

Ella reemplazara a Terrence J. Brutocao, quien presento su renuncia al Concilio el Lunes a la noche. Dijo que lo hacia para incorporarse a un negocio familiar, un establecimiento de bowling en Anaheim.

Furth se graduo en la Universidad de Stanford, y la Universidad de Harvard. Es nativa de California, y sirvio en el Centro de Estudio de la Ley en la Sociedad, en Berkeley, antes de venir al valle en Julio. Ella y su esposo viven en Claremont.

La medida presentada por Nelson Gentry, anula una poliza enterior que permitia fumar en las tres ultimas hileras de asientos en la camara.

La medida fue adoptada en un voto de 4 a 0, cuando se abolio una medida previa que autorizaba fumar en las dos primeras hileras asi como en la mesa del consejo, por 2 votos a dos.

El Consejal Tom McClure, el unico miembro del consejo que fuma, se hallaba enfermo el Lunes, y no atendio la sesion.

El concilio de la ciudad de Pomona aprobo el Lunes a la noche el establecimiento de dos zonas de estudios para el desarrollo, una cercana a la zona comercial de E. Holt Ave., y la otra en la zona industrial paralela a S. Reservoir Ave.

En una accion relativa, el concilio aprobo una resolucion por el consejal Charles Bader, que propone que los asuntos de mas prioridad son los de atraer industrias que crearian empleos.

"Tenenos que mejorar el cuadro de trabajo. No es solamente algo que el concilio debe hacer. Tenemos que hacerlo el gol de la comunidad, el mejorar las oportunidades de empleo en Pomona", dijo Bader.

Peter VanderPoel, perdedor en el 65 distrito de la Asamblea, el ano pasado, fue ganador el Martes a la noche gracias a su suerte.

El lechero de Chino gano la reeleccion a la Junta Escolar de Chino a su oponente, Patrick Hoover, en un desempate que se torno en victoria para los oficiales escolares asi como los residentes que favorecen las clases durante todo el ano.

VanderPoel saco el pedazo de papel con la palabra "elegido" de una caja en la sala de la junta del distrito.

Hoover y VanderPoel, recibieron 1,026 votos cada uno en las elecciones del 4 de Marzo, que requeria tres miembros para la junta escolar. En caso de empate, las leyes del estado exijen que el caso sea solucionado por medio de alguna clase de sorteo.

Ayala respalda transportacion el senador del estado, Ruben Ayala, democrata del 32 distrito, espera reavivar el fuego bajo su propuesta para un servicio de transportes entre San Bernardino y Los Angeles, en una reunion en Montclair el 10 de abril.

Con Ayala estara Gerald B. Leonard, planeador de transporte para la Asociacion de Gobiernos del sur de California, (SCAG), y el alcalde de Montclair, Harold Hayes.

Leonard ha preparado un estudio de posibilidades en servicios de transporte para el sur de California, que incluye la linea de San Bernardino a Los Angeles, dijo Ayala.

El senador dijo que tambien le ha enviado invitaciones al Supervisor del Condado de Los Angeles, Peter Schabarum, al Supervisor del Condado de Riverside, y a los miembros de la Asociacion de gobiernos de San Bernardino (SANBAG) que incluye a los supervisores del Condado de San Bernardino.

New laws topple tabus: divorces more than double

By Associated Press

Changing state laws and the availability of free legal services on a large scale are toppling divorce barriers and increasing the rate at which marriages are legally ended.

The United States set a record last year both in the number and rate of marriages dissolved. It was part of a 12-year upward trend in divorce which the new laws and legal aid are helping fire.

A committee of the American Bar Association's family law section says 27 states have replaced or amended divorce laws since mid-1972.

Divorces granted in California rose quickly in the first year of the new law, from 81,546 in 1969 to 112,942 in 1970, a 40 per cent increase. The 1970 California rate of 5.7 per 1,000 population dropped to 5.4 in 1971 and 1972 but rose again in 1973 to 5.7.

Divorce rate experts now say the sudden upsurge in 1970 was due not to the more liberal philosophy of the new law. It came from a reduction in waiting times from one year to six months, and from fewer Californians seeking divorces in neighboring Nevada and Mexico.

They say that Nevada's divorce rate dropped from 24 per 1,000 in 1969 to 15.6 in 1973, a 35 per cent decline. Mexico closed its doors to foreigners seeking quick divorces in 1971.

New York's State divorce rate, for years the lowest in the nation, has increased more than 6½ times in the eight years since it changed its law.

From an annual average of fewer than 4,000 divorces granted for adultery, the only permitted ground before 1967, state courts in 1974 processed nearly 55,000. Five additional grounds have been added: cruelty, desertion, imprisonment for three or more years and two types of legal separation for a minimum one-year period.

Other states have gone even further. Thirteen of them and the Virgin Islands have eliminated traditional divorce grounds altogether.

In Vermont, a free legal services program opened the same year the state reduced waiting periods for uncontested divorces from two years to six months. A state court official says these are the main reasons Vermont's divorce rate went up 155 per cent between 1969 and 1973.

The new laws and legal aid are not the only reasons for the rate increases. Divorce is becoming a more acceptable, if unpleasant, alternative for unhappy couples. Such attitudinal changes are difficult to measure, but there is no question that American society views divorce differently than it did even a decade ago. Thus even in some states where laws have not been changed, divorce rates are up.

Rhode Island — about 65 per cent Roman Catholic — has not greatly loosened its strict divorce laws recently. Yet while the U. S. divorce rate went up 38 per cent between 1969 and 1973, Rhode Island's rose 86 per cent.

During the same period, divorce was up 53 per cent in Mississippi, 96 per cent in Arkansas and 58 per cent in West Virgina. The ABA's divorce law committee has not identified any significant relaxation of divorce laws in those states either.

Figures published by the National Center for Health Statistics show that divorce rates are growing fastest in the Northeast and the South, sections of the country with traditions of strict divorce laws. Divorce is growing slowest in the West, where divorce always has been easier to obtain and its prevalence therefore much greater.

The potential for further growth also is greatest in the Northeast and the South. U.S. Census Bureau surveys in 1970 showed that the proportion of separated to divorced men and women, ages 35 to 44, was more than three times as great in the Northeast as in the West, and more than twice as great in the South as the West.

Justice Louis B. Heller of the State Supreme Court in New York City's Brooklyn borough says that divorce now exceeds the number of criminal and nonmatrimonial civil cases in his court and that, within a year or two, will surpass the combined volume of the two.

Heller says that before 1967 the stigma of adultery and the deception often practiced in New York divorce courts kept many people away. He added that Nevada or Mexican divorces, alternatives resorted to by many New Yorkers of higher income, were not available to the poor and people of modest means.

"Before 1967, I don't think I ever saw a Catholic or an Orthodox Jew in my court," he says. "But in the last two or three years, it's unbelievable how many have come in and sought divorces."

Recent New York court decisions also reflect the shift in clientele.

"Up until recently, all the decisions dealt with vast estates and thousands of dollars in alimony and child support," says Marjory D. Fields, a lawyer with the South Brooklyn Legal Services Corp.

"Now you're beginning to see decisions that talk about $20 a week child support, and $200 in counsel fees, reduced from $1,000 because the husband is too poor to pay more than that."

The recent wave of national reform began with the passage in 1969 of a pioneering California divorce law that rejected the concept of a "guilty" party and replaced it with the idea that the marriage, not the parties to it, should be placed on trial.

Since then, says the ABA's divorce law committee, the concept has been adopted either as an added ground or as the sole basis for divorce in 23 other states and the Virgin Islands. In most cases one only need show there is no chance of reconciliation.

The philosophy of the California reform is not yet officially reflected in the divorce laws of states like New York and Rhode Island. Yet its acceptance elsewhere apparently influences judges.

"At one time we took the position that the state was part of the institution of marriage and we tried very hard to keep them together," said Brooklyn's Justice Heller. "We don't do that any more. Today we ask: Is this a dead marriage? If it is, we try to

Divorce

Census Bureau surveys show that the poor offer perhaps the greatest potential for future growth in divorce, but the question is whether they want to bother. Poverty lawyer Fields is convinced they do.

"Sociologists used to say that poor people didn't want to get divorced," she says. "You know, they didn't care, it didn't matter, they just moved from one relationship to another.

"Well that's not true. I have clients who really feel very strongly that they want to be legally divorced, even when they're not remarrying."

Miss Fields now processes 800 divorces a year, about 10 per cent of the total Justice Heller predicts his court will grant in the 12 months ending next June. She says Brooklyn lawyers with the New York Legal Aid Society probably will process another 800 cases.

"We have a real assembly line here," she says.

Even so, there is a six-to nine-month wait just to see a lawyer and many people are turned away by the South Brooklyn project because incomes exceed the $80-a-week eligibility ceiling for clients.

Miss Fields says currently there is a waiting list of about 600 and around the state other legal services offices report a backlog of more than 4,000.

Legal services projects have been instrumental in other ways in reducing economic barriers to divorce. In a case brought before it by a Connecticut project, the Supreme Court in 1971 ruled that the poor could not be denied divorces for inability to pay court costs and publication fees which in some states amounted to as much as $400.

Court clerks in Philadelphia, where such higher costs prevail, say the ruling forced the state last year to pay court costs in 740 divorce cases, about 14 per cent of the total. In 1973, they said the number was about 300, slightly less than 6 per cent of the total.

The federal Office of Legal Services does not collect statistics on how many divorces its projects obtain for the poor but agency officials say that the demand has been heavy throughout the country since the program got under way in the mid-1960s.

A free legal services project in 26 rural Wisconsin counties reported in 1967, for example, that in its first six weeks of operation, 84 per cent of the cases were requests for divorce.

U.S.-Moscow tourism is dwindling

MOSCOW (AP) — Despite detente and an increased interest among Americans in Russia, the number of American tourists to the Soviet Union declined by 14 per cent in 1974, a leading Soviet tourist official said today.

Viktor K. Botchenko, head of Intourist, the government agency in charge of foreign visitors, attributed the decrease to economic problems and the decline in value of the dollar.

Boichenko told a news conference that 84,500 Americans visited the Soviet Union in 1974, compared to 91,000 in 1973. The 1973 figure was a 38 per cent jump over 1972, when 66,164 Americans came.

Over-all tourist traffic to the Soviet Union increased by almost 15 per cent last year, but most of the tourists came from Communist countries, the Intourist head said.

In general, he added, tourist trade from the West declined.

About the same number of Soviets — two million — were allowed to travel outside their country in 1974, as compared to 1973, but the vast majority went to fellow Communist countries, Boichenko said.

Boichenko repeated a statement he made last year at the beginning of the tourist season that hotels remain the No. 1 problem facing the Soviet tourist industry.

He also repeated the fact that more than 40 hotels are being built in 35 cities, but he didn't say how far construction has gotten.

Do quota systems cause reverse discrimination?

Not all black or white

By JULES LOH
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Unemployment, or today's constant dread of it, is exposing once again a national sore already rubbed raw in pursuit of two contending American ideals, equality of opportunity and achievement based on merit.

It comes down to that emotion-laden word: quotas.

Except that today, as jobs become more precious, the old fight over who should get hired first is compounded by a new argument over who should get laid-off last.

Consider this dilemna, embodied in two cases which have reached the Supreme Court:

Mr. Black was turned down for a job which was given, later on, to Mr. White. Mr. Black proved the company had illegally denied him the job on account of his race. The company was ordered to hire him.

Question:

—When the company has to lay off workers on the customary last-hired basis, which man has seniority, the one who has spent longer on the job or the one illegally kept from doing so?

—Should the innocent Mr. White be the victim of somebody else's prior discrimination against Mr. Black?

—Should the innocent Mr. Black again be the victim of somebody else's act already judged illegal?

As with nearly all such cases the answer is rarely either black or white. Both want nothing more than fair treatment. Both, ultimately, ask the same question: Why should I suffer for another person's deeds?

But when does affirmative action become, as some claim, reverse discrimination?

Among many lawsuits seeking an answer the Supreme Court has chosen so far to review just one, last year's celebrated DeFunis case, in which the Court's decision, after hearing arguments, was not to decide.

That was the case in which Marco DeFunis Jr., white, was denied admission to law school. On discovering that 36 minority applicants with test scores lower than his had been admitted, DeFunis sued. A court order got him into law school pending the outcome of the case, and by the time it reached the Supreme Court he was about to graduate. The court thus declared the matter moot and declined to rule.

"Further, the court since then has routinely declined to review a number of affirmative-action cases, most notably the 1974 Mississippi Highway Patrol case."

In that decision, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, La., approved of court-ordered "one-to-one or one-to-two hiring, the creation of hiring pools, or a freeze on white hiring, or any other form of affirmative hiring relief until the patrol is effectively integrated." At the time, only 5 of 548 Mississippi state patrolmen were black.

In other recent significant cases, the First Circuit Court in Boston required one-to-one hiring by the fire departments of Boston and Springfield until they reflected the racial makeup of the local populations, and the Third Circuit Court in Philadelphia approved of sweeping hiring reforms by labor unions and construction contractors. Affirmative-action advocates cheered both decisions, which, by its refusal to review them, the Supreme Court tacitly approved.

Should the high court decline to take up neither of the two seniority-rights cases now before it, however, it would be an affirmative-action setback.

A faltering economy gives the cases added poignancy. The current unemployment rate, which is 8.2 per cent over all, has reached 13.4 per cent for blacks and other minority races.

Jack Greenberg, the chief counsel for the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, said of one of the two cases:

"It arises from the practice of hiring blacks last when employment is rising and firing blacks first when the work force is reduced. The problem has long obstructed economic opportunity for blacks, and is one reason for the chronically higher level of employment among non-whites."

Greenberg's group represents two black bricklayers, William A. Waters, and Donald Samuels, in a suit against the Wisconsin Steel Works of International Harvester Co. and Local 21 of the United Order of American Bricklayers and Stonemasons.

Waters and Samuels were laid off, they felt illegally, and the district court agreed. The company, the court noted, hired only white bricklayers prior to April 1964. Consequently, the seniority privileges of those hired during the whites-only period were gained illegally. Indeed, said the court, the seniority system was, at least in this case, not a valid method of choosing whom to lay off.

The other case before the Supreme Court came from the Fifth Circuit, the same court that decided the Mississippi Highway Patrol case.

In this case, styled Harold Franks and Johnnie Lee vs. Bowman Transportation Co., the district court ruled that the company had followed an "unwritted policy" of refusing to hire blacks prior to Jan. 1, 1972.

The court therefore ordered the firm to give black applicants who had been turned down before that date preference for jobs should they reapply.

Since that was the case, argued Franks and Lee — who had been laid off — their seniority ought to date from the time they were illegally turned down.

The district court said no. So did the appellate court. To allow that decision to stand, argued the lawyer for Franks and Lee in petitioning the Supreme Court this year for review, would limit the power of the courts and of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to "grant effective relief to thousands of victims of unlawful hiring discrimination."

The federal government has already come down on the side of Franks and Lee.

In a joint friends-of-the-court brief, both Solicitor General Robert Bork and lawyers for the EEOC make essentially the same argument as the plaintiffs — that the appellate court ruling would "seriously impair the remedial efforts of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and would hamper the enforcement efforts of the Department of Justice by unduly limiting authority of the courts to eliminate the effects of past hiring discrimination."

Should the Supreme Court decide to take up either case, it would not be heard at least until the next term.

By that time it would be a safe bet that other advocates would join in the argument on both sides. In the DeFunis case, more than two dozen briefs were filed on behalf of more than 100 organizations and leading constitutional scholars were arraved on both sides.

In the DeFunis case, the government remained officially neutral. Actually, the EEOC filed a brief against DeFunis, but Solicitor General Bork persuaded the court not to accept it.

America uneasy about foreign investment upsurge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Imagine that a foreign country suddenly acquires great riches and starts looking for a place to invest its money.

It sees an opportunity in the United States, and its representatives quickly gain control of big chunks of real estate and a number of major hotels.

Sound like a scenario for the oil-rich Arabs?

Guess again.

It already has happened in Hawaii, and the investors were Japanese.

Foreign investments in the United States are nothing new, but the present surge of activity by Iran and the Arab sheiks is unusual in several ways that have stirred uneasiness among American businessmen and government officials.

One difference is the sheer magnitude of the wealth that Middle Easterners can afford to invest, as a result of their quadrupling of crude oil prices since October, 1973.

Another is the underlying threat of Arab-inspired discrimination against Jewish business interests, which has become a major issue in Washington.

SHAH OF IRAN will pump $300 million into Pan American Airways and gain control of its international hotel subsidiary including this new hotel on Africa's Ivory Coast.

The decision of the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to raise the selling price from $2 or $3 to more than $10 a barrel resulted in a stupendous windfall of "petrodollars" from American and other industrial importers, estimated at $90 billion last year alone.

Much of that money is being "recycled," returning to the United States and other industrialized nations as corporate and real estate investments, prompting nervous jokes that the board chairman of General Motors soon would be garbed in flowing robes and Arab headdress.

The inroads so far are impressive:

—The Shah of Iran recently reached a $15 billion, five-year trade agreement with the United States, announced his intention to buy as many as eight U.S. nuclear reactors worth an additional $7 billion and —with President Ford's approval —will pump $300 million in loans into financially troubled Pan American World Airways.

—The son of a key adviser to King Faisal of Saudi Arabia has laid out $1 million for control of the Bank of the Commonwealth, Michigan's sixth largest bank.

— Kuwait, perhaps the shrewdest investor among the Arab states, paid $17.3 million for 3,500-acre Kiawah Island off Charleston, S.C., as a prospective resort development, and has picked up major real estate holdings in Atlanta, Dallas and California's San Remo Valley.

—The federal law prohibiting foreign ownership of companies doing national security business probably was the only barrier to a $100 million bid by an Arab consortium for 41 per cent of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., the nation's biggest defense contractor. Deals for Coca-Cola bottling plants in Columbus, Ohio, and Cleveland also fell through.

Kuwait also has bought up about $500 million worth of London real estate, much of it for cash, and the tiny Persian Gulf sheikdom of Abu Dhabi got a piece of the action with an $84 million share in one of London's tallest skyscrapers.

A World Bank analyst once predicted the oil-producing bloc would amass more than $1 trillion by 1985, more than 100 times the value of the United States' gold stockpile.

The Economist, a respected British magazine, calculated the OPEC nations were earning $115,000 a second, enough to buy the Bank of America in six days, IBM in 143 days and all the companies on all major world stock exchanges in 16 years.

These figures now appear fanciful, partly because they assume inflation will continue at its present rate. Despite the investors' secrecy about the exact size of their petrodollar pool, the U.S. Treasury offers this estimate:

Of OPEC's $90 billion in oil earnings last year, member countries spent a combined $80 billion on internal development, importing goods and services that helped offset the massive balance of payments deficits run up by industrialized nations to buy oil.

Of the remaining $60 billion, about $11 billion went to the United States, $8 billion to Britain, $5 billion to other industrial countries, $2 billion to developing nations and about $3.5 billion to such financial institutions as the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

While a few prodigal Arab princes might have dropped a million or two in Las Vegas, most have spent their petrodollars conservatively. As this trend emerged, U.S. government and business leaders extended a cautious hand of welcome, apparently no longer fearful of an imminent Middle East takeover of the Fortune 500.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, in a recent interview with The Washington Star, said "we favor foreign investment and indeed, encourage it" within laws and regulations to protect national security.

Sen. Harrisen A. Williams, DN.J., has introduced a bill that would require advance public notice and allow a presidential veto of any foreign bid for a major interest in an American company. The administration opposes the bill, saying it might invite retaliation against U.S. investors overseas.

To U.S. officials, a more disturbing trend was disclosed in charges by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith of a "widespread willingness in American industry to be secret partners in an Arab plot to cut Israel off from its principal ally, the United States."

The ADL said two government agencies, the Army Corps of Engineers and the Overseas Private Investment Corp., had bowed to anti-Jewish pressure from the Arabs in hiring and policy decisions. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, released an Arab boycott list against 1,500 American firms doing business with Israel.

President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger both denounced discriminatory practices. On Ford's orders, the Defense Department is reviewing assignment of Jewish officers to Arab countries as part of a wider interdepartmental study of legal safeguards against discrimination.

Simon called off a meeting with the Saudi Arabian finance minister on economic cooperation, publicly because of a scheduling problem but privately also because of mutual discomfort over the political furor the Arab boycott list has aroused, sources said.

Convenience counts

The Seventh Earl of Cardigan, who led the Charge of the Light Brigade in the Crimean War, got tired of pulling a sweater over his head. Tradition says he designed the sweater jacket with buttons that has carried his name down through history.

JCPenney

The best thing about our airy leather sandal could be the color choice or the size choice. But we love it best because it looks a lot more expensive than it is.

Only 15.99 at JCPenney

There's no doubt about it; this sandal has a lot going for it. Soft leather, 39 sizes to choose from, plus comfort. It's made with a nylon tricot foam-back lining, padded insole, and special lightweight heel. But if color and style are what you love most, you can get this designer's look in smooth camel, white, bone, blue, yellow. And 15.99 sums it up nicely.

A 500,000-year problem

Where do we store lethal atomic waste?

MERCURY, Nev. (AP) — Three bus tours were conducted recently at the Atomic Test Site here to explain—and promote— the site's possible use as a dump for nuclear wastes.

The U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration is looking for a place to solidify and store radioactive wastes from the nation's nuclear power plants.

The test site, about 65 miles from Las Vegas, a barren desert where nuclear bombs and missile warheads are tested underground, is one of three spots under consideration.

The other two are the Hanford Nuclear Complex in southern Washington and the National Reactor Testing Station in southeastern Idaho.

The ERDA says there are now 55 nuclear power plants in operation, and that 130 more are in construction or planning stages. The lethal waste is now stored at the plants.

There has been opposition in the three states against having the dump. The ERDA — formerly the AEC (Atomic Energy Commission) — organized the bus tours to convince Nevada civic leaders and concerned citizens that they have nothing to fear. Opinion seems more favorable than hostile.

The buses took their riders first to a briefing, then to a building on Jackass Flats where the radioactive waste would be handled before storage.

The building, called E-MAD, was finished in 1965 at a cost of $55 million to handle radioactive materials for a since abandoned nuclear rocket development project.

Technicians would handle the canisters with remote control devices from behind five-foot-thick concrete walls and five-foot-thick windows.

The canisters would be given an additional steel and lead coating, then placed in air-conditioned, concrete vaults. One plan calls for the vaults to be spaced out over hundreds of acres on Frenchman Flat. The buses went there.

There are also two solid granite "stocks," solid shafts inside mesas, at the test site. One granite stock is one mile in diameter at the top. The other is eight miles.

William J. Brady, senior health physicist for one of ERDA's contractors, said holes 16 feet in diameter could be drilled into the stocks as deeply as one mile and the waste inserted safely.

Radioactive wastes contain elements such as Cesium 137 and Strontium 90 and will continue emitting deadly gamma rays for 250,000 to 500,000 years.

The word storage is used by ERDA instead of disposal. It may want to retrieve the wastes in the event scientists find a use for them.

Also, any plan for permanent disposal must guarantee safety for at least 500,000 years — not easy on a planet whose human societies as well as its geological formations are known to occasionally shift and lurch.

Later, films on the safety precautions at nuclear plants. There was a question-answer period.

The ERDA's David Miller was proud of the tours.

"Personally, I think you could store those canisters safely in Central Park in New York," he said.

"But if you play the what-if game, asking 'What if an earthquake hits,' or 'What if there's a flood,' then Nevada comes out the best.'

Brady said nuclear tests already have placed immense amounts of radioactivity under Frenchman Flat and nearby Yucca Flat without any known harmful results.

As for earthquakes, constant nuclear blasts in the area assure that latent seismic tensions are released little by little, he said.

And surface water? He said the area is closed — water flows only in, never out.

But of 11 persons interviewed aboard one of two tour buses after the presentation, four said they had misgivings or wanted more information.

H.K Madison, a retired engineer, said, "There should be some more hearings and information. There's so much ground to cover I can't get a feel for it."

But Gov. Mike O'Callaghan would like the dump to be here, as does the las Vegas mayor, Chamber of Commerce, commissioners of Clark and Nye counties and the Las Vegas Labor Council.

They cite the economic beneifts. Once the site is chosen, there will probably be at least $130 million worth of construction, says Miller, and 200 to 300 permanent jobs will be created.

Organized opposition in Nevada consists largely of 15-year-old, Reno-based Foresta Institute for ocean and mountain studies.

Energy

Foresta Program Coordinator Susan Orr said in an interview that "there's a fair amount of opposition."

Miss Orran, who said she and Mrs. Miller went on one of the test site tours, said one student at the University of Nevada at Reno gathered more than 1,000 signatures in two weeks on a petition requesting more information on the plan.

A geneticist at the University of Nevada at Las Vegas, Leonard Storm, said organized opposition "in the southern part of the state is practically nonexistant."

Storm, an opponent, said, "The public has not been given the necessary background material to judge.

"We've entered into a technology that produces poisonous wastes that have to be separated from society for 250,000 years...We know very well that society never remains stable for as long as even 100 years...We're talking about some sort of priesthood that would have to look after these wastes..."

Storm said ERDA "has the worst credibility of any of the government agencies."

He cited an underground nuclear test a few years ago in which a small amount of radiation escaped. "Every time they have one of these accidents they cover it up," he said.

Credibility is also a concern of UNLV geology professor William G. Fiero.

At a recent talk to the Clark County Democratic Women's Club, Fiero said ERDA announced the storage facilities now used by the Hanford, Wash., nuclear plants were "safe and practical."

Later it was discovered that radioactive materials had been leaking for 16 years.

"I'm concerned about whom I can believe," said Fiero.

He criticized ERDA for having environmental impact hearings in Germantown, Md., and Salt Lake City — but not in Las Vegas or Reno.

"That's a disgrace," he said.

The ERDA is proud of its safety record — about 400 safe shipments of radioactive wastes in the last 25 years.

One plan for hauling the canisters to the site would have 12 of them behind special shielding on a railroad car. The load — a "cask" — would weigh 100 tons. The car would weigh another 25 tons.

As for the safety of people along the transportation routes, ERDA says repeated shipments would never give anyone anywhere nearly as much radiation as they are now getting from ordinary background levels.

The containers would be so strong that even ammunition train explosions such as the one May 5, 1973, in Roseville, Calif., in which bombs went off carload at a time, wouldn't knock the cask off its flatcar, much less damage it, ERDA says.

ERDA said a pickup truck full of explosives such as terrorists exploded at the University of Wisconsin a few years ago "would not have breached the intergrity of a cask either."

But as for theft, Fiero says, "You don't have to lift a 120-ton car to be able to use it for blackmailing. Terrorists are doing it with airliners."

ERDA said the sheer weight of the casks would impede theft, and so would the radioactivity. The waste is not the kind of stuff that A-bombs are made of, he added.

"You need pretty sophisticated machinery to handle it," he said. "Of course someone could probably get on a railroad car and unbolt it, but what would he do then? Anyone trying to handle it would get some pretty severe radiation."

In addition, the Nevada Test Site has a security system for years — most of it is also surrounded by an Air Force gunnery and bomb range described as "like being surrounded by a minefield."

Spindle side

Females in Aniglo-Saxon clans were called the "spindle side" of the family as they did all the spinning of flax into cloth. Women were not fit to marry until they had spun their dowry of linens. In 1665, the colony of Massachusetts passed a decree requiring every family to weave three pounds of cloth a week, and set up quotas based on the number of women in a household.

Supply-demand axiom reversed by cartels

SHOP IN FRIENDLY Downtown La Verne

EDITOR'S NOTE: During the oil crisis last year, the Economist of London published a commentary titled "The Coming Glut of Energy," a piece.. for which they were generally criticized in the world press. Now the energy glut has materialized more rapidly than even the Economist foresaw. The following commentary explains why.

By NEA-London Economist News Service

History is being swayed by the increasing capability of important groups to persuade each other and themselves that they are observing the precise reverse of what is actually happening.

In oil what is happening is that the world is now trying to produce about 20 per cent more than people are willing to buy while the price of oil is around $10 a barrel, and that same glut would probably persist even if the price dropped to $3-4 a barrel. Medium-term energy policies all over the world are now geared to making this present glut enormously greater with every year that passes.

Under one of these policies the world's governments may — as a diplomatic ploy, perhaps rightly — sign Henry Kissinger's piece of paper pretending that all this generation's successors will promise to pay through the 1980s perhaps $7 a barrel, maybe index-linked, for a commodity which costs 10 cents a barrel to produce in much of the Middle East and whose marginal operating costs are sometimes barely over two cents a barrel.

If there is an index-linked floor price of $7 a barrel, then it is probable that more than half of the productive capacity of primary energy either already existing or now planned for the early 1980s will have to be held or edged out of production: indeed Kissinger's objective in talking about $7 a barrel is precisely to create such a glut.

People can believe if they wish that the capacity declared redundant will not then be the expensive (and rising-marginal-cost) capacity like Alaska and the North Sea plus the high-wage coal mines of Britain and America. People can believe if they wish that countries like Japan will be bound by a piece of paper saying that they must buy oil at $7 a barrel when marginal producers will be offering it at a price many times lower than that, and that Japan's competitors will then allow their own energy costs to stay up to 70 times more expensive than hers.

People will believe what they want to believe, including dear delusions.

The story began with the breakdown of a longstanding restrictive practice (oil companies' rigging of world oil prices against the Arabs before Yom Kippur).

The breakdown led initially to a wildly unsustainable attempt at more extravagant market-rigging the other way so that ordinary market forces swung into reaction.

While they were thus in swing, governments who always believe they can repeal the laws of supply and demand were holding meetings in lush hotels (OPEC summits, finance ministers' conference), and journalists always wrote as if something important was happening there.

But anybody who stayed home and based his guesses on any reasonable calculation of elasticities of substitution and supply could guess correctly what would happen first to demand for oil, then to stocks, then to supply and next to prices.

Before Yom Kippur of 1973, the major international oil companies rigged world oil prices in a way which ensured that their very cheap Middle East oil did not undercut their sometimes 40-time-more-expensive oil from existing and intended ventures in uneconomic areas like North America, the Arctic, the North Sea. This market-rigging was probably illegal under American and other anti-trust laws, but was thought worth allowing to "keep us out of the power of the Arabs."

The old cartel hurt consumer because it kept selling prices well above marginal cost, but kept most of the gravy from the most efficient producers (Arabs) so as to finance the digging of oil from uneconomic areas on which these companies got both a producer's and distributor's profit.

At the same time, the companies cannily did not push selling prices so high as to induce substitution or indeed even so high as to maximize monopoly profits (leaving grateful Western governments room to impose heavy oil taxes in a still rising market).

The big question was always whether the Arabs, when the moment came to strike the oil companies down, would be too greedy, and stimulate over-supply

Second only to Russia

Romania: The envy of Eastern Europe

PLOESTI, Romania (AP) — Some 9,000 feet below the surface of the Prahova Valley lies what one Romanian official describes as "added insurance on our independence" — oil.

In face of the whopping hike in the price of Soviet oil, Romania finds itself the envy of Eastern Europe because of its rich oil deposits — second on the Continent only to Russia's.

Until they were devastated by Allied bombing raids in World War II, the Ploesti oil fields kept Hitler's war machinery moving.

"If it weren't for their oil reserves," one Western diplomatic source in Bucharest observed, "Romania would be much more vulnerable to external pressures."

Not only would Romania be forced to fall more into step with the Kremlin, the source added, it would find itself reduced to being an East bloc grainery and producer of unfinished goods. As it is, Romania is engaged in a drive toward industrialization — albeit at the expense of consumer goods.

Moscow's recent sharp oil price increase has fueled Romania's determination to maintain its independent course, in the view of Western diplomatic observers.

The Soviets now are charging their Eastern European allies about 2½ times more for a barrel of oil — $7.50 instead of the previous $3. This is still less than the world market price of $10.46, but nevertheless the increase is expected to pose serious economic burdens on such East bloc states as East Germany, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria.

(The International Petroleum Encyclopedia, published in the United States, says Romania's reserves have been estimated at 860 million barrels.)

In 1970, a group of Western experts surveyed Romania's oil potential and estimated that the reserves would be exhausted in about a dozen years.

An official at the huge petroleum refinery at Brazi, just outside Ploesti, contended that discovery of new Romanian oil deposits was more than keeping pace with depletion.

"If I remember correctly, before the second World War, we were told our reserves would not last 20 years," the official told a visiting American newsman. "At the time we were extracting eight million tons — 56 million barrels — a year. Now it has reached 14 million tons — nearly 100 million barrels — and we're still drawing oil."

He spoke of new possible reservoirs in the Carpathian Mountains, which cut diagonally across the country, and of the more immediate prospect of striking oil off the Black Sea coast.

Last year, Romania extracted 101.5 million barrels of crude oil and exported 33.5

At the same time it imported about 42 million barrels, much of it from Iran. Recently, it signed a deal with Libya whereby Romania would receive 84 million barrels of oil over the next four years in return for providing Libya with sewage and other equipment.

PLOESTI'S SPRAWLING REFINERIES

against themselves.

When they quintupled the oil price under the emotion of the Yom Kippur war, it was clear that the Arabs had over-egged their pudding.

Reports of that first winter's "boycott" were delusive.

The Economist at this time simply checked the insurance coverage at Lloyd's of oil shipments from the Gulf, and found that the boycott was not being enforced as fully as both sides' propaganda alleged. Does anybody now deny this?

In the peak boycott month of January, 1974, shipments of oil from the Middle East were five per cent higher than in the free market month of January, 1975. All through the early months after the price hoist, all through the period when the world was supposed to be being strangled by the boycott, the Arabs were shipping out more oil than customers were ever likely to want to buy at the new price.

By June the glut was obvious, as tankers were told to go slow across the oceans and act as great floating storage tanks. The big oil companies made embarrassingly large stock profits in the first half of 1974 because of the quintupling in price, but now recognized uncomfortably that they might suffer huge stock losses on record inventories held at a time when demand was falling fast.

Since mid-1974 some oil companies have seemed to join with the oil countries in urging everybody to believe that prices will not come down, while backstage they have frantically cut their purchases so as not to be holding quite such large stocks when prices actually do.

The cuts in production have not been dictated by Arab solidarity, but by the companies' sensible commercial decision not to buy from the most expensive OPEC suppliers. Libya and Abu Dhabi (who were unlucky enough to enjoy price extras for their low-sulphur crude) have seen their sales cut by more than half, while Saudi Arabia was until recently selling more than before Yom Kippur.

Actually, OPEC's nationalizations have broken the old cartel up. In place of the experienced ring of the seven sisters (the big oil companies who once controlled nearly all production and distribution), there are now a dozen inexperienced nationalized companies trying to sell their oil in a market of surging surplus.

List is imposing

Let women have jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Convinced that women's abilities are underestimated when selections for high-level jobs are made, Frances "Sissy" Farenthold, chairperson of the National Women's Political Caucus, has compiled a list of 44 women qualified for top government positions.

The list appears in the April issue of "Redbook" magazine. Her suggestions include Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., as secretary of defense; Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Texas, as attorney general and anthropologist Margaret Mead as secretary of agriculture.

Mrs. Farenthold chose equal numbers of well-known and lesser known women for 22 positions in the cabinet and as heads of major government departments.

She said the list of "44 Women Who Could Save America" was compiled because too many talented women are "either doing auxiliary work or wasting away as ornaments to someone else's position."

Others suggested for high government jobs include:

Rep. Patsy Mink, D-Hawaii, secretary of a proposed department of peace; Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., Supreme Court justice; feminist editor Gloria Steinem, secretary of women's affairs; historian Barbara Tuchman, secretary of state; former Rep. Martha W. Griffiths of Michigan, treasury secretary and Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr., chairman, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Also: publisher Katharine Graham, secretary of commerce; Liz Carpenter, former aide to Lady Bird Johnson, secretary of the interior; Arvonne Fraser, founder of the Women's Equity Action League, secretary of health, education and welfare and Eleanor Holmes Norton, commissioner of human rights for New York City, secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

Also: C. Delores Tucker, Pennsylvania secretary of state, ambassador to the United Nations; Edith Van Horn, staff member, United Auto Workers Community Action Project, secretary of labor; Barbara Mikulski, Baltimore city councilwoman secretary of transportation; Letitia Baldrige Hollensteiner, business executive director of the office of Management and Budget; and Bess Myerson, former Consumer Affairs Commissioner for New York City, chairperson, Council on Environmental Quality.

Also: Eileen Shanahan, economics writer for the New York Times, council of economic advisers; journalist Sarah McClendon, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; author and journalist Frances FitzGerald, counselor to the President; historian Doris Kearns, Arms control and Disarmament agency.

Holy Name Church setting for nuptials

Miss Debra Lynn Burns and Bernard Gordon recited wedding vows in an afternoon Nuptial Mass at Holy Name of Mary Catholic Church in San Dimas.

The Rev. Michael Brooks officiated at the service which united the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester H. Burns of La Verne and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon of Johnstown, Pa.

The bride chose her sister, Sharon Burns, as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Valerie Vitale and Miss Julie Swift.

The flower girl was Lori Iskyan. Miss Sherri Burns, niece of the bride, handled the guest book.

Couturier fashions to be featured

A fashion revue, "California Couturier," will be presented by June Van Dyke Productions featuring the spring line designs of top designers Werle, Helga, Ernst Strauss, Phyllis Sues, Elizabeth Stewart and A & O Couture for the Assistance League of Upland.

The fashion show and luncheon is scheduled April 7 at 11:30 a.m. at Griswold's Pavilion.

According to June Van Dyke, special guest commentator for the show, the California Couturier showing will make women look like women should.

Presently, Miss Van Dyke is doing two shows, one with Dionne Warwicke, and another with Edith Head in Las Vegas.

Mrs. John Taves is ways and means chairman and assisting Mrs. Alan MacCarthy Jr., show chairman, will be Mmes. C. Richard Day, Eugene DeYoung, Robert Jensen, J. T. Waller, Dean Smothers, Thomas Harris, Philip Savage Jr., John Owen, Barry Brandt, Bruce Claflin, Donald White, Sidney Jones and Del Hensley. Mrs. Harris has collected over 60 bird cages to be used in decorating for the event.

Mrs. Milton Bracey, president, has announced that proceeds from the event will support the League's main philanthropic projects, Cucamonga Girls' Club and the San Antonio Community Hospital Dental Center.

Two patronesses whose names have been added to the supporters for the event are Mrs. William Batchelor and Mrs. Robert Ruud.

DECORATIONS — Mrs. Bernard Wechsler, Mrs. Charles Valentine and Mrs. Eric Noble paint and decorate bird cages which will be used to carry out the spring theme for Assistance Club fashion show.

Nurses schedule lecture

The San Gabriel Valley Chapter of the American Association of Critical Care Nurses will meet Thursday at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

In addition to its members, the meeting is also open to interested registered nurses and licensed vocational nurses.

Problems are workable

Dr. Irene Kassorla has counselled princesses and paupers, kings and commoners -- and tried to teach them that we are all in the same boat.

"I want to teach people that we are all fragile and little and vulnerable," she says, "to understand that our problems are workable and things can get better."

Dr. Kassorla, an internationally known clinical psychologist, has been teaching people to understnad and feel good about themselves through research, lectures, documentaries, two television shows of her own, private practice and a book called "Putting It All Together."

Now she will enter a new phase of her worldwide career and reach a new audience—through continuing education. She will conduct a five-week program, "Putting It All Together," on Thursday evenings for UCLA Extension beginning April 17. The series, she says, is for people who want to fall in love with their mates, their children, their colleagues, and—most important—themselves.

"I want people to learn to love themselves," says the Bel-Air mother of two with customary zeal. "People who seem cruel or petty or mean aren't really cruel. They are just desperately in pain. They feel lonely, rejected, inadequate. I'm not just going to give them hope. I'm going to give them specific ways to help them understand that we are all in the same boat. They will come out of the class in love with life and themselves."

Dr. Kassorla doesn't believe in just falling in love, but staying there.

"I'm probably one of the few psychologists left who believes in marriage," says the darkly attractive woman who has learned her own lessons from divorce. "But I believe in a new and different kind of marriage. And I don't believe in divorce. I see men who marry three or four times and they keep marrying the same woman over and over. I believe in working through it, fighting for what you have together. Life is very precious."

Adoptive group sets gathering

The benefits and responsibilities of adopting a child will be explained and discussed Friday when the West End Adoptive Family Association meets at the main library in Ontario.

The meeting will begin at 8:30 p.m. and will feature a panel discussion which will be presented by members of the San Bernardino County Adoption Services, a division of the Human Resources Agency.

The meeting is open to the public and all adoptive parents and interested adults.

Further information on the program or on the association may be obtained by calling Paul Cohen, association president, evenings at 987-6877.

Ask Dr. Brothers

Asks for release?

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My husband is convinced that we are headed for a major depression and that he'll lose his job. He may be right, of course, but he won't do anything to help avert it. Even though it would enable him to be sure of getting to work on time, he refuses to share a ride with three men in our neighborhood who all go into the city at approximately the same time as he.

He asked for a raise last month even though his boss had just said the whole company was cutting back. To me, the crazy thing is that for five years, he's never asked for a raise even though he should have had it and I had been trying to persuade him to ask. Now, he picks the one time when he's not only unlikely to get it but when his boss may fire him because he has the insensitivity to ask for it. We're now in a middle-income bracket but it's a pinch to pay the bills. My husband still won't comprise or cut back on anything. He insists on living it up while he waits for doom. I don't understand him and sometimes I wonder if he's mentally well. —T.Y.

Dear T.Y.: From what you say, it doesn't sound to me as if your husband's headed for a nervous breakdown, but he does seem to be indicating that he wants some major changes in his life. He may have wanted them for some time, but is now hoping that the decisions for a marked change will be forced upon him. This relieves him of direct responsibility and makes him a helpless victim of circumstance.

For instance, I'd guess that your husband would like to lose his job. I'm sure this is not a conscious desire and he'd probably deny it vehemently, but his actions indicate that he's almost wishing for some exterior force, such as a depression, to clarify his life and point to a new direction.

Some individuals select subtle ways to program themselves for failure. I'm using "failure" in the conventional sense. In your husband's case, losing his present job might be a kind of success. If he is as unhappy as he seems to be, he might actually use a period of unemployment to re-examine his goals and find himself.

It's surprising how many parents, especially in the middle-income economic bracket, feel that a depression would be good for their children. Many so-called successful businessmen also feel that their wives and families have been spoiled and softened by expecting and receiving so much. Depression can pull families closer together and get back to basic values. Many Americans don't need to live as luxuriously as they do and they might even find that they would be happier and less pressured with a simpler life.

By continuing to "live it up" your husband may simply be trying to bring about your own personal family depression a bit sooner. Most of us have mixed feelings about the values of our materialistic society. We both enjoy and deplore it. Your husband obviously feels this ambivalence too.

Many men and women who are surrounded by people in offices, stores, and factories all day want the freedom to daydream and be quiet as they ride to work alone. This is a luxury that may soon be a part of the past, but your husband's refusal to share a ride is just one more example of his rebellion against a life style that seems frustrating and unrewarding for him.

SCHOLARSHIP LUNCHEON — Mrs. Ray Morales, Mrs. William R. Dale and Mrs. Quay Ives make decorations for the Cal Poly Women's Club fashion show and luncheon to be held April 12.

GAIL ANN ROSS

Troth told

May 8 will be the wedding day of Miss Gail Ann Ross and Dwight Wesley Wilson.

The bride-elect is the daughter of William A. Ross of Rowland Heights. She graduated from Workman High School, City of Industry.

Miss Ross is a clerk-typist with the Federal Bankruptcy Court in Los Angeles.

Mr. Wilson is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Wilson and the grandson of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Hendricks of Claremont. He graduated from San Antonio High School, Claremont, and is a business major at Cal Poly Pomona.

By Cal Poly Women

Style show set

"Fashion Creations" will be the theme of the 10th annual scholarship luncheon and fashion show to be held by Cal Poly Women's Club at 11:30 a.m., April 12.

The event, to be held at Kellogg West on the campus, will feature fashions presented by Mrs. Selwin Berg, manager of Expres-Sew of Claremont. Students of Mrs. Berg will model fashions which they have made from fabrics featured by Expres-Sew.

Mrs. Quay D. Ives, chairman, will be assisted by Mrs. Ray Morales, Mrs. Beaumont Davison, Mrs. Murray Abramovitz and Mrs. Arthur Glenn.

Proceeds from the event will enable the club to present scholarships to deserving Cal Poly students.

Further information may be obtained from Mr. Ives at 624-7824, or Mrs. Morales, 622-5212. No tickets will be sold on the day of the luncheon.

Pomona OES sets luncheon

Pomona Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star Social Club, will meet for luncheon Wednesday at the Pomona Masonic Temple.

Luncheon will be served by Mrs. R. J. Holmes, Mrs. Wiley M. Clapp and Mrs. George N. Gilbert.

Reservations may be obtained by calling Mrs. Frank D. Rentchler, 622-8320, or Mrs. Victor Teska, 593-9898.

Topete and Danton betrothal announced

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Topete of San Dimas announce the engagement of their daughter, Diane Marie, to Jerry P. Danton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Louis of Taylor, Mich.

A June 28 wedding is planned by the couple.

The bride-elect graduated from Bonita High School and majored in business at Mt. San Antonio College. She is employed by Jewelry Enterprise.

Mr. Danton attended Taylor, Mich., Center High School, Fullerton Junior College and Cal State Long Beach. He served four years in the Marine Coprs.

He is credit manager at Byron Jackson Pump Division, Borg Warner Corp.

Sewing contest charted

Montgomery Ward, Montclair, announces the opening of a sewing contest, running now and continuing until April 15 for girls 13 to 18 years of age.

Contests will be divided into two age groups, 13-15 and 16-18 and should be currently enrolled in or have completed a home economics course in their schools. They will create a garment of their choice and submit it to their local Montgomery Ward store for judging. Two winners will be selected in each store.

Local judging will be followed by district and national juding. Local and district prizes will include merchandise and Wendy Ward Modeling courses. Nationally, two first-prize winners will receive five-day trips to New York for themselves and their home economics teachers.

The contest is sponsored by Montgomery Ward, Monsanto Wear-Dated fabric, Simplicity patterns and Teen Magazine.

Applications may be picked up at Montgomery Ward in the fabric or sewing machine departments. Each application includes a 10 per cent discount coupon for Montgomery Ward fabric and notions used to create the garment.

For information on the contest call Wendy Ward director, Debbie Moseley, at 621-3054.

The Tide has Turned!
Things are Improving!
We're Back on the Beam!

For the first time in several months we're really feeling a new surge in business. More people are coming to Griswold's than ever before. The gift shop is a hum of activity, and the bakery is having a hard time keeping up with the wonderful fresh breads, cakes and Easter goodies developed by Hugh Fersel. Our new master baker, Alice and the great crew in the Smorgasbord Kitchen are all prepared to serve a delicious turkey and ham Easter dinner with all the trimmings.

Our cute Easter Bunny will arrive on Monday the 24th and be here during dinner all week including Easter Sunday. Bring the Kids for a real treat.

The drepression seems to be for those who think it, and we don't—come join us—where the action is!

Coulter and Royalty nuptial vows repeated

MRS. RICHARD COULTER

The United Methodist Church of La Verne was the setting for the marriage of Miss Terri Louise Royalty and Richard Edward Coulter.

The Rev. J. Thomas Taylor performed the double-ring rites uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Royalty Sr., of Pomona and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell F. Coulter of Pomona.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of statapeau with an empire bodice and floor-length A-line skirt. Venise lace adorned the bodice and formed the high collar. Matching lace encircled the skirt and the cathedral train.

The bride carried pink and red roses intermingled in a cascade of ivory roses.

Mrs. Carol Ann Ross was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Pamela J. Coulter, Mrs. Katherine S. Shier, Miss Alice Coulter and Mrs. Roxanne Tolbert.

Candlelighters were Yvette Coulter and Tena Coulter. The flower girls were Carol Sue Noyes and Kim R. Dunn.

Ring bearers were Scott Harvey and Michael Coulter.

Glen Thompson was best man. Ushers were Mark W. Coulter, Bruce Coulter, Robert R. Royalty Jr. and Robert A. Shier.

A reception at the church honored the newlyweds. Mr. and Mrs. Coulter will reside in Pomona after a honeymoon which will include a trip to Hawaii and Manila.

MRS. DONALD DWIGGINS

Miss Judith Diane Combe and Donald Wright Dwiggins were united in marriage at the Trinity United Methodist Church, Pomona, with Dr. John Black performing the double-ring service.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Combe of Forest Falls was given in marriage by her father. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dwiggins of Highland.

Mrs. Shirley Kavanaugh was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Sherry Anderson and Miss Cheryl Galliher.

Julie Allen and Joel Allen, niece and nephew of the groom, served as flower girl and ring bearer, respectively.

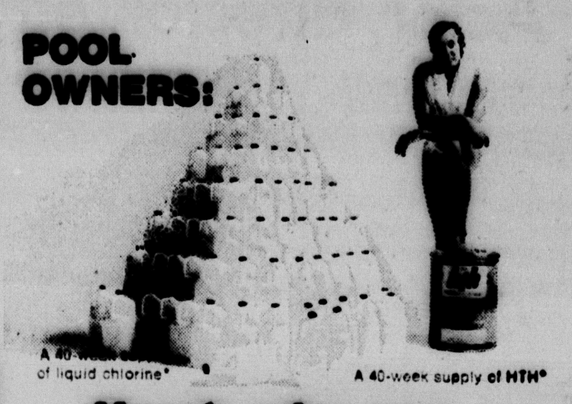
POOL OWNERS:



A 40-week supply of liquid chlorine*

A 40-week supply of HTH*

Here's why you should be using hth now that liquid chlorine costs the same.

HTH is more convenient To chlorinate a stabilized 20,000 gallon pool for 40 weeks takes about 65 gallons of liquid chlorine. Or one 75 lb. drum of HTH.

HTH leaves you more fun time Liquid chlorine requires numerous trips to your pool supply dealer, lugging back empties, wasting time and travel costs. Buy one drum of HTH and spend your time swimming!

HTH is more trouble-free Liquid chlorine raises alkalinity rapidly. HTH has only a minor effect on pH.

SPECIAL TRADE-IN OFFER TO LIQUID BLEACH USERS Bring in a case of 4 empty liquid chlorine gallon containers. We'll give you a 5 lb. or 5½ lb. package of HTH (granular or tablets) at no additional cost! We're that sure you'll be back for more.
Offer expires April 15, 1975

*Estimated for 20,000 gallon pool, properly stabilized under normal summer weather conditions

He sat in the gas chamber once as a joke, but now faces it in dead earnest

SAN QUENTIN (AP) — Ernest Martinez says he once sneaked inside the San Quentin Prison gas chamber where he is sentenced to die.

Twelve years ago Martinez, then a prisoner in on a drug and escape conviction, said he sat in a chair in the apple-green chamber after he gave the old inmate cleaning the room a cheeseburger.

Martinez, convicted of killing two men in 1974 Los Angeles area robberies, is now one of 12 San Quentin inmates sentenced to die in California's gas chamber. He recalls his chamber visit:

"I worked in the snack bar and I went over and gave the old man a cheeseburger sandwich. I said, 'I see you got the door open.' He tells me, 'Come on in.' "

Martinez said he sat in one of the chamber's two chairs. For a joke, the old man shut the door, locking him in. Martinez said he had a "cold feeling" until the door opened.

"I didn't like it. Little did I know that 12 years later I would come under sentence of death. If you had told me, I would have laughed at you," he told The Associated Press in an interview.

Martinez, a big 40-year-old man with wisps of black, collar-length hair sticking out from under a black wool cap, told the other condemned men about his experience.

Crison officials have said "no way," Kreuter said.

"I might go there someday. I want to be prepared. I don't know if it would help, but I am curious to see what it looks like. I have seen pictures of it," Kreuter said, his blue eyes staring ahead.

In the interviews, both Kreuter and Martinez sat behind a wire mesh screen in the prison visiting room. Dressed in blue prison clothes, they were handcuffed to chains attached to chains around their waists.

Both men say they wait to see what the U.S. Supreme Court will do about a pending death penalty case.

The California Supreme Court has accepted written arguments in one of the 12 inmates' cases and told attorneys for the other inmates to wait for unspecified developments that may bear on their cases.

No California inmate has a death sentence date yet because all death penalty cases are on automatic appeal to the state Supreme Court.

On Jan. 1, 1974, a new state law placed the death penalty back on the books for several specific capitol crimes. In 1971 the Supreme Court nullified death penalties on technicality stating they were unconstitutional. All 109 persons on Death Row then — including Charles Manson — had their sentences commuted to life imprisonment by the ruling. None of those 109 can be put to death now.

Jack Lemmon

Actor, director, environmentalist

By EVE SHARBUTT
AP Newsfeature Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Lemmon waxed nostalgic:

"There were no big stars then, and nobody knew anybody because nobody WAS anybody, and anything could happen."

Live television drama in the 1950s was his topic, and film actor Lemmon cut his acting teeth in dramas by Paddy Chayefsky and Rod Serling directed by Arthur Penn and other top film directors of today.

"Those were my good old days," Lemmon said in an interview before going to lunch with members of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. They were honoring last year's Oscar winner for best actor on his 50th birthday. "Live TV drama laid all the bricks for me in many ways. It was like instant stock. I had done summer theater, but television built my career. Those were exciting days. You'd have five lines in this show and 400 in another. . .

"Those was a tremendous excitement about parts, and there was a lot of work. The result was a happy time, not just for me personally but for the whole industry. There was excitement and anticipation and a security that is not there today and I don't know if it will be again in our lifetime."

Lemmon returned to television in 1972 and won an Emmy for a George Gershwin special. This summer he will appear in an American adaptation of "The Entertainer," which Lord Olivier did for British TV.

"We're setting it in the 1940s, when the war had just started, and Archie Rice will be not just a vaudeville performer but a would-be impresario, clutching at straws and trying to make it. We'll film it in Long Beach and perhaps release it as a feature film in Europe afterward." Lemmon is starring in two films now in release: "The Front Page," with Walter Matthau, and "The Prisoner of Second Avenue," with Anne Bancroft.

"Working with Matthau and Billy Wilder—they're my greatest friends—is fun but the part of Mel Edison in 'Prisoner' is a sensational part with more depth. For 25 years I've been trying to find a film to make with Anne Bancroft. We've been friends since the late 40s but we never worked together until this came along.

"She'd never had a chance to show her comedic talent. She has enough common sense not to try to be funny. I think she's the best American actress today."

Waving his pencil-slim black cigar, Lemmon sipped coffee in his hotel suite. In the future is another television special on the environment which he hope to do with Paul Newman and perhaps Marlon Brando.

Pollution and the environment are serious concerns for Lemmon. He wants the special to concentrate on the population explosion, but he also has narrated programs on air and water pollution.

"There are three schools of thought, you know. Optimistic scientists feel pollution isn't serious. Fatalistic scientists claim we're past the point of no return on pollution.

"A third group says we're almost there, and they're afraid by the time we decide to do anything about it, it'll be too late.

SOME CHORUS LINE — Mitzi Gaynor leads the single most expensive male chorus line ever assembled on her CBS special Monday night. Thirty name actors from comedians to dramatic stars signed on as a gag to perform with the dynamic Miss Gaynor. The entire line signed on without pay in exchange for the show's producers making a huge contribution to the Motion Picture County Home and Hospital.

Carol Speed: a happy childhood

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — There's a film around now called "Abbey," about a pretty young black girl who is possessed by an evil spirt. The easy thing is to say that this is a black exploitation film, a ripoff on "The Exorcist."

But Carol Speed, who plays the title role, objects strongly to that easy categorization. In fact, she hates the term "black exploitation" totally.

CAROL SPEED

"Nobody ever talks about 'white exploitation,'" she says. "I think people should say that 'Abbey' is designed simply to be good entertainment. It's a crossover film—both blacks and whites are seeing it and enjoying it."

Carol Speed is one black without residual bitterness from an unhappy childhood. She says she grew up living the American dream. In San Jose, Calif., where her father owns a service station, she had a happy childhood—"no rats or roaches." She owned her own car at 16, had a singing group with two cousins.

She grew up with the American dream of a lot of money but she says she's outgrown that. Now she wants to do good things and the money will follow. She's turned to writing, and has finished a novel and is writing the synopsis of a screenplay.

But, for a while, she says she wants to play—writing the novel and making "Abbey" were hard. For the time being, she wants to catch up on some living.

JESSE LASKY JR., whose father was one of the kings of early Hollywood, has written a fascinating book about his memories of those golden days. It's called "Whatever Happened to Hollywood?" —

Dick Kleiner: television Q. and A.

DEAR DICK: Richard Thomas (John-Boy Walton) recently married Alma Gonzales. Please tell us how old the newlyweds are and is the new Mrs. Thomas an actress? — M.W., Indiana, Pa.

He's 23 and she's 26 and, no she's not an actress. She's a teacher and recently has been teaching English to Mexican-Americans in the Los Angeles school system.

DEAR DICK: When and where did John Denver's 1910 Gibson guitar gets it crack? — C.M.W., Bay Minette, ALA.

John wishes he knew the answer to that one so he could crack back at whoever was responsible, he lost it two years ago. It was in perfect condition when he lost it. It was returned in March 1973—cracked. That's all he knows.

DEAR DICK: There was an old movie called "Back Street," with John Boles. What actress played the leading role? It was about 1926. —E.B. WETZEL SR., Marrero, La.

You're off by six years—that was 1932. Boles' leading lady was the lovely Irene Dunne.

DEAR DICK: What is Soupy Sales' real name? And could you tell me why the Roller Derby is not on the air now? — MRS. R.F. PIERCE, Louisville, Ohio.

That's an interesting combination of questions, conjuring up a picture of Soupy in the Roller Derby, flinging pies as he skates by. Soles' real name is Milton Hines and, so for the Derby, you'll have to ask your local station. That's its decision.

DEAR DICK: When was the first 3-D movie made? A friend said: "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," starring Charles Laughton, was 3-D I say "House of Wax," starring Vincent Price, was first. Please settle this argument. —MRS. CAROL BRANDT, Jefferson, La.

Technically, you're both wrong, although you're closer. "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" was not in 3-D at all. Actually, Hollywood experimented with 3-D as long ago as 1935 but it was in 1953 that they really tried to make it work. "Bwana Devil" was the first out but it was pretty bad. There were about a dozen made that year and "House of Wax" was probably the best of them.

Entertainment briefs

Kukla, Fran and . . .

LOS ANGELES (AP) — First, "The Mickey Mouse Club" returned. Now comes another television delight of the 1950s — "Kukla, Fran and Ollie."

Millions of Americans now in their 20s and 30s grew up to the antics of the "Kuklapolitan" family created by puppeteer Burr Tillstrom. They included Oliver J. Dragon, Ollie for short, and his pal Kukla. The pair and other characters appeared with real-life Fran Allison.

NBC has announced that the show, with Miss Allison, will return as a weekly half-hour series on the network's five owned-and-operated stations in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Washington and Cleveland. The show will be produced here and will be distributed to other stations by Baron Enterprises.

Scott not done

LOS ANGELES (AP) — George C. Scott's resolve to retire from acting continues to crumble.

Last year the actor said he hoped to devote himself entirely to directing and producing movies. But recently he agreed to portray attorney Louis Nizer in a two-hour television movie for CBS, "Fear on Trial."

Now Scott has been announced for another starring role — in a film of Ernest Hemingway's "Islands in the Stream." The film is the first production of Max Palevsky, who made millions with his Scientific Data Systems firm, and Peter Bart, former aide to production chief Robert Evans at Paramount.

"Islands in the Stream" reunites Scott and director Franklin Schaffner, who won Oscars for "Patton." Schaffner accepted his.

No trend

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Five years ago, Paramount Picture moved its production offices out of its Hollywood studio and into a building in the heart of adjacent Beverly Hills. Film observers scented a trend.

It wasn't. No other film company followed suit, and now it is reported that Paramount will be moving its executives back to the studio by the coming summer.

More moving news: United Artists, which has long had its offices at the venerable Samuel Goldwyn Studio, plans to relocate at the MGM studio in nearby Culver City. United Artists distributes MGM films, hence the marriage contains logic.

'Emergency' renewed

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The cancellations and renewals continue flowing from the television networks. Latest to be picked up for another season is "Emergency!"

NBC has announced the series, made by Jack Webb's Mark VII company with cooperation of the Los Angeles County Fire Department, will return for its fifth season next fall.

Perlee named as West End 'Die Fledermaus' director

Charles Ross Perlee of Hollywood has been named conductor and stage director for the April 19 production of "Die Fledermaus" by the West End Opera Association.

The opera by Johann Strauss will be presented in the Spring Auditorium, Ontario.

A native Californian, Perlee received a bachelor degree in piano performance from UC Santa Barbara and served as conductor for the Santa Barbara Ballet and Opera Guild. He founded and conducted the Pasadena Opera Ring before playing percussion and piano for the Seventh U.S. Army Symphony Orchestra.

He was awarded a Fulbright scholarship in 1959 and studied opera conducting at the Munich Conservatory. After serving with the Spoleto Festival of Two Worlds, the Bremen State Opera of West Germany and the Schweizer Theater Gastspiele in Switzerland, he returned to America and joined the musical staff of the San Francisco Opera Association.

Perlee has also been stage director for the Honolulu Symphony Opera Festival, founded the Honolulu Opera Workshop, was conductor and stage director for the Redlands Bowl Summer Festival and served as interim head of the opera department at UCLA.

"Die Fledermaus" will be sung in English. It closes the 10th opera season of the West End group. Tickets will be on sale April 1 in music stores. Additional information is available by calling 987-1586.

LA ballet opens 16 shows April 1

The Los Angeles Ballet will appear at the Huntington Hartford Theater in Hollywood April 1-5, offering a different program each night and Saturday matinee in a repertoire of 16 ballets with six premieres.

The Los Angeles Ballet was founded in 1973. John Clifford, a native of Los Angeles and a leading dancer-choreographer with the New York City Ballet, joined forces with the 13-year-old Los Angeles Junior Ballet to produce a series of performances.

Clifford then decided to leave the New York City Ballet and become artistic director of the Los Angeles Ballet. Under his direction, the Los Angeles Ballet has become the dominant Southland ballet company.

Among the dancers are Johnna Kirkland, Polly Shelton and Marilee Stiles, formerly soloists with the New York City Ballet; Nancy Davis, former leading soloist with the National Ballet in Washington, D.C.; Katherine Prescott, former soloist with the Stuttgart Ballet in Germany; and Steven Wistich, former soloist with Stuttgart, the Netherlands Dance Theater, the Ballet de Grand Theater of Geneva, Switzerland and the Ballet Classic de Monte Carlo.

Others include Victor Barbee who studied at the Kirov Ballet School in Leningrad, toured with the North Carolina Dance Theater and was a guest soloist at Jacob's Pillow; and finally, Colette Jeschke who appeared with the New York City Opera Mozart Festival and was soloist with the Geneva Ballet.

At Cal Poly

National Artists meet opens Tuesday

Elizabeth Catlett, recently retired chairman of the sculpture department of the Federal University of Mexico, will be the principal guest speaker during the National Conference of Artists convention Tuesday through Saturday at Cal Poly's Kellogg West.

Mrs. Catlett joins a host of other members of the organization of black professional and student artists, art historians, drama troupes, art teachers, singers, writers, educators, museum and gallery representatives and musicians for the week-long celebration.

A reception opening an exhibit of her works at the Claremont Colleges' Clark Humanities Museum Thursday night will feature Horace Tapscott's Pan-African People's Arkestra (PAPA).

The troupe will present American and African black music, dance and drama from 7:30 to 10 p.m. in the Wilbur Hall lounge of Scripps College.

The Catlett exhibit will be open to the public free of charge from 9 a.m. to noo and 1 to 5 p.m. weekdays.

While in California, Mrs. Catlett will be honored by the City of Berkeley on March 30 for her artistic contributions to the cause of social development.

Others who will participate in the NCA convention include Jacqueline Teamor, project coordinator of Inner City Cultural Arts Festival for the Philadelphia Museum of Art; Lisbeth Gant, West Coast editor of Essence Magazine; Beah Richards, actress and playwright; Frances Williams, actress; Reginald Andrews, teacher, pianist, arranger and conductor; Jerome Richardson, musician ; Earl Palmer, drummer, composer, arranger; Whitman Mayo, actor famous for the role of Grady on "Sanford and Son"; Bill Crite, photographer; Candace Reed, architectural student at USC; Suzanne Jackson, artist, member of the California Art Commission.

Scripps ceramics show oldest in the nation

The oldest annual ceramics exhibition in the United States opens at Lang Art Galleries, Scripps College, on April 1.

The 31st annual ceramics exhibit will include the works of 23 ceramists throughout the country.

Paul Soldner, Scripps ceramics professor, is organizing the exhibit. He explained that, in its early years, the ceramic annual featured only the works of "big names" of the ceramic world.

About 15 years ago, he said, that concept was changed so that new people of proven ability could exhibit. Currently the show is stressing mostly unknown but highly recommended talent, he added.

"Two of our ceramists — Ken Little of the University of Montana and L. F. Saucier of Sheboygan Falls, Wis. — are bringing their works by truck because of the size. I understand a few pieces are almost room-size, measuring eight feet high and from 12 to 16 feet long. There seems to be a trend to the larger pieces by some of the ceramists who want to be involved with sculpture," Soldner said.

The free opening reception willbe 8 to 10 p.m. April 1 in Lang Galleries. The exhibit may be seen from 1 to 5 p.m. daily and from 7 to 9 p.m. on Wednesdays through April 27.

Worldwide youth arts fest set in Hollywood

"Festivals and Celebrations," a collection of artistic works created by young people from throughout the world, will be on display in the gallery of the Junior Arts Center, Barnsdall Park in Hollywood, Monday through April 20.

Compiled by the Western Association of Art Museums, the exhibition features a variety of media. The 30 selected pieces are from the International Child Art Center in San Francisco which has encouraged creativity and cultural awareness in children through art.

The gallery is open Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sundays, noon to 4. Admission is free.

RSPCA: troubled times

By HOWARD A. TYNER

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals marked its 150th anniversary with the members squabbling among themselves and its management and staff in royal disarray.

An independent commission finally concluded the state of the RSPCA was "appalling" and charged its executive council was as interested in show as in animal welfare.

Now Britain's 55,000 organized animal lovers have selected a new chairman, as strongly recommended by the inquiry panel, and charged him with restoring luster to the tarnished RSPCA image.

"We must all pull together for the sake of the society," dog lover Michael Kay, 38, an accountant, said after his appointment. "From now on things are going to be different around here."

At the root of the dispute lies a controversy over the so-called blood sports, the ancient practice of hunting game with packs of hounds, but it is by no means the only problem the society has had.

The troubled affairs of the RSPCA hold more than passing interest in Britain, where the care and feeding of animals ranks only slightly below human welfare.

Newspaper advertisements regularly solicit donations to farms for retired donkeys. Last summer an enraged pet lover tried to sue Capt. Mark Phillips, Queen Elizabeth's son-in-law, for whipping his horse during show trials.

More recently, a woman brought charges against Agriculture Minister Fred Peart for using unnecessarily cruel methods to kill diseased badgers. He was cleared.

For years, rows have been boiling in the RSPCA, a $4.8 million-a-year charity with the primary task of looking after strays from Britain's 13.5 million cat and dog population.

One time the society worked out a much publicized deal for a $110,000 contribution from a pet food firm, only to discover that the company filled its tins of dog food with meat from whales, a disappearing species.

Another time members complained that RSPCA officials spent $48,000 on an annual meeting, $816,000 on a new building but only $40,800 on animal welfare in a given year.

The society has also been charged with using "Nazi-like" methods to destroy unwanted cats and dogs.

But the emotional issue of blood sports threw the RSPCA into turmoil and brought about the year-long, $84,000 probe into its affairs.

The executive council had for 15 years resisted pressure to take a stand against fox-hunting on grounds it remains the best method of controlling the population of the species.

"As long as it is done for this purpose and not purely for the sake of killing, we back the sport," an official said.

Reform leader Vera Sheppard said former chairman John Hobhouse, a wealthy landowner, came "from a well known hunting family."

The lengthy report by the three outside investigators accused some RSPCA officials of being "wildly unreasonable and abominably rude." It recommended that the 46-member council be cut by more than half and demanded that Hobhouse be replaced.

But on blood sports, the panel made no specific recommendations, leaving it up to the jovial Kay to deal with the problem.

Kentucky stops No. 1 Indiana, 92-90

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Since its third game this season, Kentucky has been a team with a mission. The Wildcats accomplished it Saturday in dramatic style by snapping Indiana's 34-game winning streak to advance to the semifinals of the NCAA's college basketball tournament.

"Indiana is a great ball team but I think we wanted this one a lot worse than they did," said Rick Robey, one of the Wildcats' two 6-foot-10 freshmen centers who were so instrumental in the 92-90 Kentucky victory over the nation's top-ranked team.

"This game is everything we've been working for since that loss," Robey said of Indiana's 98-74 romp over Kentucky last December. The avenging victory sends the fifth-ranked Wildcats, 25-4, into the NCAA semifinals next Saturday in San Diego against Syracuse.

It was Robey and fellow freshmen center Mike Phillips who did much of the damage with 10 points each and rugged board work. But they were still not able to contain the pressure of Indiana's 6-11 Kent Benson, who scored a game-high 33 points, had 23 rebounds and was named the Most Valuable Player of this Mideast Regional tournament.

However, Benson and Steve Green, who had 23 points for the Hoosiers, could not compensate for a balanced Kentucky attack led by senior guards Mike Flynn and Jimmy Dan Conner, who had 23 and 17 points, respectively. Forward Kevin Grevey also had 17.

"Our bench just wore them down," said Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall. "Then we switched from a 1-3-1 zone to a man-to-man defense, and it destroyed their confidence."

Hall said he instructed his guards to take quick shots in order to deny Indiana's sticky defense any chance to get set up. "We wanted to be loose offensively," said Hall, whose team hit nearly 57 per cent of its field goal attempts in the second half.

The victory ended a victory string for Indiana which began after a loss to Michigan last year in the Big 10 playoffs.

"The better team just won. That's all I can say," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight.

"We'll be back some day."

For Flynn, the Kentucky mission had taken longer than mere months. He and the other seniors in a highly-touted draft class made up for three years of frustration when they were picked to win and didn't.

"Last night we were more serious than we've been all year," Flynn said. "We went to a movie and then right to bed. There wasn't any of the usual joking or talking.

"This victory is kind of a dream for the seniors on this team. We've been working four years to accomplish it and beating a top-ranked team and getting into the NCAA semifinals is like a dream come true."

The Wildcats blew the game open with a 16-4 surge in 4½ minutes midway through the final half. Phillips and Kevin Grevey each had two baskets in that stretch, and Robey also had four points as Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall effectively alternated his centers.

Indiana, seeking the inspiration to send the Hoosiers toward a national title, started 6-7 forward Scott May for the first time since the All-American suffered a broken left arm on Feb. 22 against Purdue. May, who scored 25 points in the December victory over Kentucky, made only one of four shots in 7½ minutes of play before leaving the game.

The lead changed hands 10 times in the first half, with both teams constructing individual offensive spurts. Hoosier Coach Bobby Knight, becoming infuriated over a foul to forward John Laskowski, collected a technical foul midway through the first half.

The outburst resulted in four Kentucky points, giving the Wildcats a lead. Indiana soon regained the lead on two baskets by Benson and Bobby Wilkerson. That sent the Hoosiers ahead 36-31.

Fired-up Bruins romp to NCAA semifinals

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The second-ranked UCLA Bruins, led by Marques Johnson's career-high 35 points, won their ninth straight NCAA Western Regional basketball tournament Saturday, romping to an 89-75 victory over seventh-ranked Arizona State.

"I'm very pleased," said UCLA Coach John Wooden. "We've been playing without very much intensity lately, but we seemed to have it back—at least for this particular game."

UCLA, seeking a record 10th NCAA title—all in the last 12 years—plays third-ranked Louisville in the NCAA semifinals at San Diego next Saturday. The Bruins had their string of seven straight NCAA titles broken in the semifinals last year by North Carolina State.

"I gave them a little talk about this after our game Thursday," Wooden said Saturday in referring to the Bruins' 67-64 squeaker over Montana in the regional semifinal.

"Marques had perhaps his best game," Wooden said. "They had a smaller man on him, and he was able to take advantage of it very well."

Johnson, a 6-foot-6½ sophomore forward from Los Angelse, took advantage of the smaller man assigned to him, 6-2 Rudy White. Johnson hit on 14 of 20 shots from the field and seven of eight from the free throw line and scored 20 of his points in the first half when the Bruins established their superiority.

"We were mentally ready, but we did not play like it," said Arizona State Coach Ned Wulk. "Our total ineffectiveness under the boards was a big factor, especially in the first half. UCLA played an intelligent game, as they usually do."

The Bruins pulled down 29 rebounds in the first half, compared with just 15 for the Sun Devils.

Arizona State, trailing 68-48 with 12:08 left, went back to its full court press and cut the lead in half, pulling to within 10 points at 83-73. But only 1:01 remained on the clock.

Guard Lionel Hollins contributed 10 points to that rally and 6-10 center Scott Lloyd hit nine. Hollins finished with 16 points and Lloyd led the Sun Devils with 20.

"They picked up some points on it (the press), but not enough to be a factor," Wooden said. "We were afraid of Arizona State's quickness. We had size on them, but I think too much is made of that. Quickness is a team's most important asset."

Johnson, who suffered from hepatitis early in the season, did not practice with the team Friday, choosing instead to rest.

"I felt ready to go," he said. "I told myself I was going to take the ball to the basket and put it up. If the shot is there, I'm going to take it. And they let me have it a few times."

And he made it a number of times, capitalizing along with his teammates on UCLA's ability to handle the Sun Devils' pressing defense.

Louisville beats Terps, 96-82

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — The game between third-ranked Louisville and No. 4 Maryland, two teams known for explotive shooting, was not decided by offense but by Louisville's sticky defense and the Cardinals beat the Terrapins 96-82 in the NCAA Midwest Regional championship basketball game.

"They came in as the best shooting team in the country and we held them to 43 per cent," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "I thought it was our defense that got us through all year and it helped us again today."

The triumph moved Louisville into the national semifinals for the third time. The Cardinals will face the West Regional winner in San Diego on March 29.

Maryland came into the game as the No. 1 shooting team in the nation with a 55 per cent average, but Louisville's sharpshooters more than matched the Terps. All five of Louisville's starters scored in double figures.

Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell agreed that the Terps' shooting was sub-par. "We had a lot of little ones that seemed like they went in and then came out," he said. "Louisville is a very fine team and could win it all. I hope they do, since they beat us."

Guard Phillip Bond led the Cardinals with 23 points and was named the outstanding player of the tournament.

Crum also praised Wesley Cox, who scored 15 points but who had been a doubtful starter because of a hamstring injury.

"I honestly didn't think Wesley could play," Crum said. "But what can you say? He came in and hit six of nine (field goal attempts) and got nine rebounds on a leg I didn't think he could jump on."

Louisville's defense also mastered Maryland's press, which had helped the Terps beat Notre Dame Thursday night. The Terps' press was most effective in a late second-half charge that cut Louisville's lead to four points, but the Cardinals then pulled away.

Joining Bond on the All-Tournament team were John Lucas of Maryland, Junior Bridgeman of Louisville, All-American Adrian Dantley of Notre Dame and Bob Miller of Cincinnati.

Bond ignited Missouri Valley Conference champion Louisville to an early lead while Maryland suffered from cold shooting. Bond picked up the scoring slack for Bridgeman, the Cardinals' top scorer, who hit only one point in the first half and picked up his fourth foul after five minutes of the second half.

Nevin scores two in Kings' shutout

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veteran Bob Nevin struck for two short-handed goals and goalie Rogie Vachon posted his sixth shutout of the season, a career high, as Los Angeles defeated Pittsburgh 4-0 Saturday night.

The victory gave the second place Kings 97 points, six behind National Hockey League Division 3 leaders Montreal, and clinched a tie for second place.

Vachon was brilliant in the final period to preserve the shutout and chalk up the 28th whitewash of his career and fifth against Pittsburgh in 11 games. He turned back 17 shots in the third period and a total of 31 in the game.

The Kings staked Vachon to a three-goal lead in the first period as they captured their third straight victory and third in six meetings this year with the Penguins.

Don Kozak shot Los Angeles into a 1-0 lead at 4:31 when he deflected a shot past Pittsburgh goalie Gary Inness and Frank St. Marseille made it 2-0 at the seven-minute mark on a backhanded effort.

UP THEY GO

Arizona State's Rudy White (32) goes up for a shot and so does defending Andre McCarter (45) of UCLA. White got his shot off over McCarter, but UCLA won, 89-75, in NCAA playoffs.

Kansas State falls, 95-87

Surprising Syracuse wins

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—"There's somebody up there who loves us," said Rudy Hackett. And the way Hackett's Syracuse Orangemen keep winning, there just might be.

Hackett scored 28 points, two of them on a left-handed shot over his head at the buzzer which sent the game into overtime, as upstart and unheralded Syracuse, 23-7, won the NCAA's East Regional championship 95-87 over Kansas State here Saturday.

The victory, which nullified a Kansas State effort that seemed to have given the Wildcats a ticket to the NCAA finals, sent Syracuse to San Diego instead.

Hackett, a 6-foot-9 senior forward who facially resembles Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, had four points in overtime and combined with Jim "Bug" Williams on the critical play at the end of regulation to seal Kansas State's fate and end the Wildcats' season with a 20-9 record.

"We've been the underdog in every tournament we've played," Hackett said. "I was a little worried when we went into the game 3½ point favorites. We like to play the role of the underdog."

Hackett's tying basket was shot at the buzzer after a feed from Jim Williams, five seconds after another Williams— Kansas State's Chuckie, this tournament's Most Valuable Player — had given the Wildcats a 76-74 lead.

Chuckie Williams, who scored a game-high 35 points to give him 67 in two games, had hit from 30 feet in the final seconds after Kansas State had held the ball for a minute to play for the final shot.

But Hackett and Jim Williams had other plans. The little Williams took the ball out of bounds and sped down the court, feeding to Hackett in the lane.

Hackett said he juggled Bug Williams' pass. "The ball was getting kind of slippery...but fortunately I was able to recover," he said. "Jimmy was telling me if he got the ball, he would get it into me. So I was expecting it.

"I saw it all the way and just turned around and put it into the basket. It was a set play to get the ball and throw it inside. I wasn't certain I had beat the buzzer. I couldn't hear it."

The shot appeared to leave Hackett's hand just at the buzzer. "When he (Hackett) bobbled it I thought time would run out," Jim Williams said. "He scared me."

The final five minutes of regulation was an incredible see-saw battle which Chuckie Williams seemed to have ended with his 20-foot shot with five seconds left. But that was before Hackett's heroics.

P-B Staff Writer

A plentiful supply of hitting and some strong pitching can be expected Monday morning throughout the valley as the Pomona Elks Lodge No. 789 hosts the annual Invitational High School Baseball Tournament, an Easter week tourney which boasts a huge field of 32 varsity teams and 16 junior varsity clubs.

A total of 14 valley prep teams will see action in the annual classic, which is considered the world's largest high school baseball tournament.

All the action begins Monday morning at 9:30, when eight games open first-round competition at eight different fields. The first round of action continues when 16 more clubs take the same eight fields at 11:45 a.m.

The second round will also be conducted Monday, beginning at 2 p.m. and playing through 9 p.m.

All eight San Antonio League teams will be competing in the annual tourney, with four of the other schools coming from the Hacienda League.

The top-seeded teams in the competition will be two San Antonio League powerhouses. In fact, the top four seeds belong to SAL members.

Damien, currently holding down the SAL lead with a 2-0 record along with Montclair, is the top-seeded club in the lower division of the brackets.

The Spartans pride themselves on tough defense and good pitching from Frank Pastore and Vince Garcia.

Chino, claiming a 1-1 record in the SAL after losing to Damien by a 4-3 margin in its league opener, is the top club to beat in the upper bracket.

The Cowboys' strength lies in their awesome hitting attack, led by catcher John Lusk, centerfielder Tim Derryberry, and infielder Manny Delgado.

The third-seeded position goes to Montclair, which boasts a good pitching staff and some hearty bats.

Mike Medeiros, Don Pierce and Brett Jetton figure to see a lot of action on the mound, while guys like Dave Urquidi, Dave Walton and freshman Kent Gurney figure to add some power to the Cavaliers' offense.

Damien opens the competition at 11:45 a.m. Monday against Compton High on the Pomona High varsity field. Meanwhile, Chino will see its first action in the tournament at 9:30 a.m. against Alta Loma on Ralph Welch Park's North field.

Montclair opens against Corona Del Mar at 11:45 a.m. at Montclair High, while hosts Pomona entertains Workman at 11:45 a.m. on the featured Welch Park South field.

Solomon will battle Hrebec

MEMPHIS (AP) — Harold Solomon survived the powerful serve of top-seeded John Alexander Saturday night and advanced to the finals of the $64,000 World Championship of Tennis-Memphis Classic against unseeded Jiri Hrebec of Czechoslovakia.

Boyd, Sloan will lecture

ANAHEIM — Bob Boyd of USC and Norm Sloan of North Carolina State will be guest lecturers at the Medalist World of Basketball Coaches Clinic at the Sheraton-Anaheim Hotel, May 2-4, 1975. The announcement was made by Mrs. Norman J. Fischer, Chairman of the Board of Medalist Industries.

Bob Boyd has developed a sound and powerful program at USC during his tenure. He is the only USC coach to win 24 games — a feat he has achieved twice. His teams have placed second five times in the Pacific Eight Conference. Boyd has taken teams to post-season tournaments on various occasions.

Norm Sloan achieved his ambition of a national championship just eight years after arriving at North Carolina State. Selected as National Coach of the Year in 1974, Sloan's team defeated Marquette in the NCAA finals. Sloan's team placed second in the Atlantic Coast Conference this year and turned down a post-season bid to the NIT.

This will be the first Medalist Basketball clinic ever held in Southern California. Over 500 coaches are expected to attend. Other staff members include Fred Schaus, Purdue; Guy Lewis, Houston; Norm Ellenberger, New Mexico; Bob Dye, Cal St. Fullerton; Bill Mulligan, Riverside City and Tandy Gillis, Corona del Mar High School.

Oregon falls short in NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — Armond Hill's two free throws with 1:21 left gave Princeton a tense 58-57 victory over Oregon Saturday and advanced the Tigers into the final of the 38th National Invitation basketball tournament.

The Tigers earned a spot in today's championship game against surprising Providence, which earlier beat St. John's 85-72 as Gary Bello drilled in seven straight shots and led a second-half rally.

The red-hot Ivy Leaguers won their 12th game in a row in the nightcap of the nationally televised doubleheader at Madison Square Garden, but not before some tense moments at the end.

The teams never were more than five points apart during any time in the game. The Ducks had a 55-52 advantage after a foul shot by Mark Barwig with 6:37 remaining before the Tigers shot ahead 56-55 on a pair of field goals by Mickey Steuerer and Hill.

Gerald Willett connected for Oregon with 2:09 left, giving the Pac-8 team a 57-56 lead, but that was the last time the Ducks were able to score.

Hill, driving for a basket, then was fouled by Ron Lee. The Tigers' 6-foot-4 guard converted two free throws for the game's final points.

Princeton's tough defense then did the rest of the job. The Ducks had several opportunities to score in the last 25 seconds, but were unable to get off a good shot.

With 13 seconds to go, Princeton's Ilan Ramati missed the first half of a one-on-one foul shot situation, giving the ball to Oregon. The Ducks called time out twice in the last 13 seconds, trying to set up a play, but were unable to get a clear shot. Lee, who scored a game-high 24 points, fired a desperation shot with one second to go, but it was far off the mark.

Barnes Hauptfuhrer scored 15 points and Ramati had 13 for Princeton, 21-8. Willett added 11 points for Oregon, 20-9.

Oregon and St. John's will meet in today's consolation game.

Ben Jipcho wins twice in ITA meet

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Amazing Ben Jipcho won the two-mile, then came back 56 minutes later to win the mile in one of history's greatest doubles at the International Track Association's fourth 1975 meet Saturday.

The 32-year-old Kenyan won a fast two-mile from Tracy Smith in 8:27.0 and then stunned a small crowd at the Los Angeles Sports Arena with a 3:56.2 time in the 11-lap mile. It was the third fastest indoor mile in history.

The two-mile victory was worth $2,000 as part of ITA's bonus set-up, the mile $600 for winning and and additional $200 each for bettering his own pro mile and two-mile records of 3:56.6 and 8:34.0.

In the mile, Jipcho took the lead from the start and was followed closely by former Oregon State runner Keith Munson, one of only two people ever to defeat Jipcho in 28 pro races.

Munson grabbed the lead briefly but with 2½ laps left, Jipcho pulled away. Munson's 3:58.5 was a lifetime best, and world outdoor record holder Jim Ryun was timed in 4:00.3, his fastest race in two years.

JC all-stars in AAU finals

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Larry Gray scored 32 points to lead the California Junior College All-Stars to a 98-97 semifinal victory over Seattle in the National AAU basketball tournament Saturday night.

Cubs' rally falls short, 3-2

Singer shines for Angels

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Bill Singer pitched five innings of one hit ball Saturday and the California Angels held off a belated Chicago rally in the ninth inning to shade the Cubs, 3-2.

Singer, becoming the first Angel pitcher to work more than three innings, surrendered only a first inning triple to Bill Madlock while striking out four and walking two.

California received a double and single from Orlando Ramierez, making a strong bid to become the opening day shortstop, as it posted its ninth victory in 11 Cactus League decisions.

Dave Chalk added two singles while Bruce Bochte chimed in with a triple and Mickey Rivers lent a double to the eight-hit Angel attack against Ray Burris and Steve Stone.

Mickey Scott hurled two runless innings for California but Dave Sells was touched for two runs on three hits in the ninth.

Madlock, with two triples and a single, accounted for half of Chicago's six hits.

The Angels cut their roster to 40 by sending eight players to their minor league camp at Holtville. Sent out were pitchers Al Dopfel, Sid Monge, Frank Panick and Gary Wheelock, catcher Rocky Jordan, first baseman Dan Briggs, third baseman Ron Jackson and outfielders Dave Collins and Frankie George.

California also traded relief pitcher Ken Sanders to the New York Mets for 23-year-old catcher Ike Hampton.

Sanders was 0-0 in nine games for the Angels last year after he was acquired from Cleveland. Hampton batted .241 in 95 games for the Mets' Tidewater farm team. Sanders will report to Tidewater while Sanders will be sent to Holtville.

MSAC hosts JC decathlon

Sixteen athletes from all over Southern California will compete Monday and Tuesday in the first annual junior college decathlon championships at Mt. San Antonio College.

Four decathletes from Chaffey College are entered in the competition, led by John Lawrence, a 6-2, 175 pounder who has scored 6,339 points in previous competition. The others are Mike Myers and Gary Wise who have scored 5,310 and 5,747 points, respectively. Rick Carr, a football player, will make his first decathlon appearance. MSAC's Eddie Crawford is also a novice, as are nine other competitors who are entered.

Steve Alexander of Huntington Beach's Golden West College ranks as the favorite in the competition.

Alexander, 6-3, 170, has best point total of 6,936. His specialties are the long jump, high jump, pole vault and quarter mile.

Dodgers fall in extra innings to Astros, 2-1

COCOA, Fla. (AP) —Jose Cruz singled with the bases loaded in the 10th inning Saturday to give the Houston Astros with a 2-1 exhibition baseball victory over the Los Angeles Dogers.

Cruz' game-winning blow came after Enos Cabell had led off with a triple and intentional walks had been issued to Cliff Johnson and Milt May.

Greg Gross scored Houston's other run with a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning. Ken McMullen singled in Los Angeles' only run in the eighth.

Cruz had three of Houston's 12 hits while Steve Garvey had a triple and a single for the Dodgers who collected seven hits.

J. R. Richard pitched the first six innings for Houston and allowed only two hits.

Messersmith said afterward he was pleased with his performance.

"I can start the season right now," last years 20-game winner said. "I felt very strong today." He has given up just three runs in 17 innings.

Rex Hudson followed Messersmith's five scoreless innings with two more scoreless innings. The loss went to non-roster player Skip Todd who worked the ninth and 10th innings, giving up both Houston runs.

The Dodgers now are 10-5 for the spring and have won nine of their last 11 games.

Today they meet the New York Mets in St. Petersburg, the game to be televised to Southern California.

Left-hander Doug Rau will start for Los Angeles against the Mets' Craig Swan. Rau will be making his fourth appearance. He's 0-0 with two earned runs in 12 innings.

BMW wins Sebring 12-hour race easily

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — A German-made BMW, manned by a crack international driving team, scored a runaway victory Saturday in the 23rd renewal of the Sebring 12-hour sports car race.

Finishing in the next four positions were durable but less speedy Porsche Carreras, with George Dyer of Jacksonville, Fla., and Jacques Bienvenue of Montreal, Canada, holding the runner-up spot more than 25 miles in the rear.

Third place went to John O'Steen of Florissant, Md., and Dave Helmick and John Graves, both of Miami. Michael Jourdain and brothers J.C. and Gustavo Bolanos of Mexico City drove the fourth-place Carrera. G.W. Dickinson of Palatine, Ill., and Bill Webbe of Barrington, Ill., finished fifth.

Claremont girls capture Coachella Relays crown

Competing against four girls teams, Claremont won four of the seven events to collect 31 points to Coachella Valley's runnerup total of 22 points.

Claremont's Terri Ryan, Staci Johnson, Kelly Robertson and Kathy Ryan set a new meet record in winning the 440-yard relay on the all-grass track in 55.4 seconds.

A meet record also fell in the 880 medley, with Staci, Teri Murphy, Kathy Ryan and Jennie Stary competing. Under the windy conditions, the girls were clocked in 2:01.2.

The mile relay team of Kim Stanley, Miss Johnson, Terri Ryan and Miss Stahy set a third meet record by winning in 4:22.5.

Miss Stary also established a meet record by winning the high jump at five feet, one inch. Claremont's Martha Brownlee finished second at 4-8.

Fourth-place finishes for Claremont went to Kathy Ryan in the 100 (12.5), Miss Stanley in the long jump (14-8), and Shannon Piette in the shot put (27-8).

Disgusted Palmer loses GJO lead

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Arnold Palmer was a thoroughly digusted man. It showed in the set of his massive, slopping shoulders. It was evident in the grim lines around his mouth. It could be seen in the weary frustration of his eyes.

Sports news in brief

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Don Helling of St. Louis outscored Jay Robinson of Los Angeles 237-213 in the championship game Saturday to win the $80,000 New Orleans Open Bowling Tournament.

Helling averaged 251 pins Saturday afternoon in finals play to earn $10,000 and take his fourth career title.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Muhammad Ali's trainer of 17 years is picking the heavyweight champion to knock out challenger Chuck Wepner in the ninth round of their world championship bout Monday night.

"I figure my man will take him out in the ninth," said Angelo Dundee, who has trained 12 boxing champions, working for five titleholders at one time.

BOSTON (AP) — Washington Capitals Coach George Red Sullivan resigned Saturday night after guiding the team through 17 games.

The Capitals announced that General Manager Milt Schmidt will take over as coach for the final seven games of the team's National Hockey League schedule.

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Australia's Rod Laver and Mexico's Raul Ramirez captured their World Championship Tennis Blue Group semifinal matches of the $69,000 Altamira Tennis Classic in Caracas Saturday.

Laver lost the first set, then came back to crush Jeff Borowiak of the United States 4-6, 6-3, 6-2.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Master Derby charged past eleven other 3-year-olds at the Fair Grounds Saturday to claim the winner's purse in the $100,000 Louisiana Derby and leap a big hurdle on the way to the Kentucky Derby.

Mrs. R.E. Lehmann said the Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland may be the next contest for her victorious colt.

"We have him entered in the Arkansas Derby at Oaklawn in two weeks, but we may skip that for the Blue Grass," she said.

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — Jockey Walter Blum and trainer Bill Wilmot worked to their battle plan to perfection for Saturday's $124,200 Gulfstream Park Handicap.

"We wanted Gold and Myrrh to be running second to the favorite (Proud and Bold) and then go after him leaving the far turn," Blum said. "We got the position we wanted without any trouble and when I asked my horse to fire, he got the job done."

Gold and Myrrh, owned by the trainer's father, W.F. Wilmot, was a length behind Proud and Bold to the far turn, drew even with him nearing the stretch turn, and then outlasted the favorite by a neck after a head-and-head battle for a quarter of a mile.

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Sue Roberts turned back the challenges of defending champion Jane Blalock and Pam Barnett with a wind-blown 72 Saturday and retained the lead in the $48,000 Bing Crosby-San Isidro Ladies' Professional Golf Association Tournament.

Miss Roberts was two over par for the day on the 6,315-yard San Isidro course and it gave her a 142 for 36 holes, two under par in her chase for the top prize of $6,400.

WAY UP THERE — Arizona State center Scott Lloyd brings down a rebound as UCLA's Pete Trgovich (25) starts to fall back on defense in Bruins' 89-75 romp over the Sun Devils Saturday in Portland.

With All-American Dave Meyers battling a variety of leg injuries, Johnson handled the bulk of the Bruins' offense. He repeatedly converted steals and rebounds into baskets as UCLA rushed to a 14-point bulge at 46-32.

Johnson, who had averaged 10.6 points during the regular season and had never scored more than 22 points in his two varsity seasons, stung Arizona State early and often. He had 13 points in the game's first 10 minutes, as the Bruins shrugged off State's press to take charge.

His 35 points was the second highest total ever by a UCLA forward. Meyers holds the school record for that position with a 39-point game.

Once UCLA moved in front, Arizona State seemed to get rattled and began committing turnovers. UCLA quickly built a slim early lead into its comfortable 46-36 halftime, dominating the backboards with 6-9½ Rich Washington and 7-1¼ Ralph Drollinger helping the Bruins to a wide first-half rebounding edge.

Arizona State managed to convert only two of its eight first-half free throws.

Johnson continued to blister the Sun Devils as the second half started and with Washington blocking shots and grabbing rebounds, UCLA broke the game wide open. Soon the lead was 20 points, at 64-44, and the Bruins were thinking about San Diego.

State, led by Lionel Hollins and James Holliman, tried to stay with the Bruins and at one point, the Sun Devils sliced the lead to 13 at 70-57. But Drollinger came off the bench to sink two quick baskets and with Meyers helping Washington on the backboards, the Bruins soon had restored their big margin.

Then with less than 10 minutes left to play, Arizona State made one more run at UCLA. The Sun Devils shaved the lead to nine points at 78-69 and Coach John Wooden rushed Johnson back into the game.

Johnson quickly scored a basket and then soared high over the defensive rim to grab a rebound. Washington spun off two straight layups and the Bruins were home free after that.

The victory ran UCLA's record to 26-3. Arizona State finished at 25-4.

Kentucky halts Indiana's streak

Kentucky then returned with nine points of its own to pull into a 40-38 lead. Benson scored to tie the game at 40-40 and it was tied at 44-all at the half.

Kentucky, on three baskets by Conner, opened a 55-50 lead with about 16½ minutes remaining. But then Steve Green and Benson brought Indiana back into a 58-57 lead.

With the Hoosiers leading 63-61, the Wildcats took the lead for good on two baskets by Flynn and one by Conner, a 6-4 senior who is the team's captain.

The Wildcats stretched their lead to nine points at 79-70 with 5½ minutes remaining before Benson, who was becoming a one-man show, slowly began closing the gap for the Hoosiers, who frantically pressed in an effort to catch up.

Benson's tip-in with 24 seconds remaining closed the gap to 90-88. But then Grevey, a second team All-American, sank two free throws to give Kentucky a four-point lead.

Laskowski scored for Indiana with 14 seconds remaining to close the Kentucky lead to 92-90. But Indiana was unable to get the ball back, and their unbeaten streak disappeared.

Kentucky Coach Hall, winning for the first time over Indiana in five attempts, credited his bench and a newly designed defense with ending the Hoosiers' strength.

"Our bench wore them down," Hall said. "And we changed defenses for this game. We went from a 1-3-1 to a man-to-man and it seemed to work.

Grevey, who scored 22 points to lead the Wildcats in their loss to Indiana, scored 17 points Saturday. But eleven of those came in the first half when he made only four of his 14 field goal attempts.

Robey and Phillips each finished with 19 points for Kentucky. But they made their presence felt in many other ways as well.

Green, who had 34 points in Indiana's victory over Oregon State Thursday, had 21 against Kentucky.

Central Michigan defeated Oregon State 88-87 in the consolation game.

Syracuse wins again in overtime

Hackett sent Syracuse ahead 78-76 at the outset of overtime, but Chuckie Williams tied it at 78-78, the last time Kansas State was to see a portion of the lead. The Orangemen then rattled off six straight points to open a 84-78 lead with two and a half minutes to play.

The clincher came when the 6-3 Lee drove and scored a layup with 1:43 remaining and was fouled on the play. He completed the three-point play and Syracuse, 23-7, had an insurmountable 87-80 lead.

Jim Williams scored six of Syracuse's critical points in the overtime period. Kansas State's Chuckie Williams' basket, a 25-foot jumper midway in overtime, was the only points the Wildcats could score in the critical overtime stretch when Syracuse outscored them 11-2.

Syracuse took an early lead behind the hot outside shooting of Lee, who wound up with 25 points, five of them in overtime. The Orangemen led 18-9 with 11:10 left in the first half, but at that point Lee cooled off and Chuckie Williams heated up.

Scoring 15 points in the first half, Williams brought his 17th-ranked team within one at 18-17. The remainder of the first half was fairly even, but Syracuse did not relinquish the lead until 1:21 remained in the halt when Kansas State guard Mike Evans, playing with a face mask to protect a broken nose, hit two free throws to send his team ahead 35-34.

The Wildcats led 38-36 at the half and maintained their lead until Hackett combined with Chris Sease to push Syracuse into a 46-46 tie four minutes into the half.

Louisville's defense does job vs. Maryland

Maryland, which never has made the final four of the national championship tournament, never led in the game but twice tied the score in the first half.

Louisville, which played in the NCAA championship tournament in 1959 and 1972, led 42-37 at halftime, but it wasn't until midway through the second half that the Cardinals took complete charge.

Louisville, now 27-2, blew to its biggest bulge of the game after eight minutes of the second half when the Cards took a 71-55 lead on a bucket by sophomore Danny Brown.

Maryland made one more charge, cutting Louisville's lead to an 82-78 margin with 4:20 left in the game. But Louisville, with baskets by William Bunton and Bond, pulled back ahead and stalled out the final 2½ minutes.

Allen Murphy supported Bond in the scoring with 20 points for Louisville. Bridgeman and Bunton finished with 13 each.

Wesley Cox, recovering from a hamstring injury, was a big addition to Louisville's lineup. Cox played briefly Thursday night against Notre Dame, scoring three points and getting two rebounds. Against Maryland, Cox finished with 15 points.

The Terps were led by John Lucas, who hit 27 points, and Owen Brown, who scored 19. Tom Roy scored 16 and Steve Sheppard 10.

Maryland, which used its press so effectively in whipping Notre Dame, opened against the Cardinals with the same tactic, but experienced Louisville had it diagnosed and solved it from the start. Louisville hit 67 per cent from the field in the first five minutes of the game while Maryland hit 38 per cent.

The game was tied at 6-6 and 14-14 before Louisville took charge behind Bond. The Cardinals' biggest first-half lead was 40-30 with 3:05 left on a basket by Cox, who scored 10 of his points before intermission.

Rain washes out baseball games slated

Early morning rain washed out three scheduled doubleheaders and one single game Saturday.

Cal Poly was supposed to play two games with Stanford. The games were cancelled since there is no way they could be made up.

Claremont-Mudd and La Verne had to postpone their doubleheader until Monday, March 31. Azusa Pacific was to have hosted Point Loma in a pair and had to call it off. It is not known if the games will be made up.

Chaffey JC will make up the game it had slated with Cypress Friday at noon at Chaffey. That game will determine third place in the Fullerton CC Tournament.

Cal Poly will have gone exactly three weeks without playing when the Broncos host Oregon in a twinbill Tuesday. The last time Poly played was March 4.

Since then, the Broncos have had games with Loyola, Fullerton, Pepperdine, CSLA, UC Irvine and Stanford rained out, a total of 11 games.

Trojan Bronze wins Santa Anita feature

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Trojan Bronze, a strong frontrunner this year, moved to the front of the pack early and scored a 3¼-length victory in the $108,500 San Luis Rey Handicap at Santa Anita Saturday.

Jorge Tejeira pushed Trojan Bronze over the 1½-mile dirt course in 2:29 3-5. Okavango was second and Montmartre third in a race which was moved from grass to dirt when a morning rain softened the turf.

Trojan Bronze, the longest shot on the board at 9-1, paid $21.60, $7.60 and $3.80. Okavango, ridden by Jacinto Vasquez, returned $5.60 and $3.80. Sandy Hawley piloted Montmarte to a $3.20 payoff.

Each horse packed 126 except Tallahto, who carried 121.

Trojan Bronze won the San Marcos Handicap this season but has had an otherwise spotty record. The 4-year-old colt is known, however, as a horse who runs well when he is setting the pace or close to the pace but clear of other horses.

Saturday Tijeira pushed him on the outside shortly after the mile pole where he passed Montmartre and drew away to win clearly. Montmartre, in third place, was 3¼ lengths behind Okavango in the field of 4-year-olds and up. Gai Hai was fourth and Coup de Feu was last.

The victory earned $63,500 for Trojan Bronze's owner, Adrian B. Roks. Okavango, owned by the Cardiff Stock Farm, earned $20,000 while Montmartre, owned by William Breliant, won $15,000.

The annual shootout: San Dimas vs. La Verne

By PHIL ROCHE
P-B Staff Writer

THE ANNUAL GOLF shootout between San Dimas and La Verne will be held Friday, April 4 at, you guessed it, San Dimas Canyon Golf Course, Bryce Bailey, director of San Dimas Parks and Recreation, has announced.

The fifth annual Ninety-Ten Shotgun event will begin at 11:30 with 120 players setting their sights on awards and low scores.

Dinner alone is $4.

Entry blanks can be obtained from and turned into Parks and Recreation departments of both cities. Deadline is Tuesday, April 1.

THE SAN DIMAS Chamber of Commerce's Ed Nelson Celebrity Golf Tournament at Via Verde has been scheduled for Friday, June 13, Bailey states.

THIS IS THE year of the Rabbit on the Chinese calendar. It's also the year of the golfing rabbit in the $200,000 MONY (Mutual of New York) Tournament of Champions.

Tournament chairman Allard Roen has announced that 10 pros will be making their debuts in the MONY T of C April 24-27 at the La Costa Resort Hotel, Spa and Country Club. The record for first-time players is 11 in 1969.

Experts say the toughest tournament to win is the first one. The above will agree. Two won after sudden-death playoffs, six won by a single stroke and one by two strokes. Only Fitzsimmons had a laugher, winning the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open by four shots.

Their victories came on some formidable courses, too. Curl won the Colonial National on the tough Colonial track, Menne the Kemper Open on Quail Hollow CC, Watson the Western Open on Butler National (3-OVER par), Regalado the Pleasant Valley Classic on Pleasant Valley CC and Fitzsimons on storied Riviera CC.

They'll be confronted with the best shotmakers on the planet, including defending champion Johnny Miller, Jack Nicklaus, Gene Littler, PGA champ Lee Trevino, Masters and British Open champion Gary Player, U.S. Open winner Hale Irwin, Dave Stockton, Al Geiberger, Buddy Allin, Dave Hill, Hubert Greene, Jim Colbert, Bobby Nichols, Miller Barber, J. C. Snead, Bob Murphy and Ed Sneed.

ON MARCH 11, 1970, 11 women met to form the Marshall Canyon Women's Golf Club. On March 16, 1975, a capacity field of 60 (30 couples) celebrated the 5th anniversary with a Blind Partners Draw match, followed by dinner, reports Dale Harbicht, publicity chairman.

First place was a tie between the teams of Butch Lockabey and Lorraine Basinski, and Tom Keanan and Delayne Lazar. Closest to the pin: men, Tom Rodgers; women, Lorraine Basinski. Longest drive: men, Butch Lockabey; women, Ellen Schick. Fewest putts: men, Ralph Tassio; women, Nicki Taylor.

OFFICIALS OF THE Bing Crosby National Pro-Amateur and the Bob Hope Desert Classic have ratified their contracts with the PGA Tournament Players Division, thus assuring the continuation of the two events.

The details were worked out by TPD Commissioner Deane R. Beman and the committees for the two tournaments, headed by Dan Searle, tournament chairman for the Bing Crosby; and George K. Collins, president and tournament chairman of the 1975 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

The contracts assure that the charities will continue to benefit from the two tournaments. The principal beneficiary for the Bob Hope Classic is the Eisenhower Medical Center in Palm Desert, Calif., which has received nearly $3 million from the all-charity Classic in recent years.

WINNERS OF THE Los Serranos March 15 Member-Guest Tournament held on the South Course were announced this week.

They were Ron Huff and Gary Waldron (Red Hill), net 64; second were Frenchy Gallant and Vince DiMartino (California), 67; third Kevin Sullivan and Dr. Les Horvath (Oakmont), also 67. Horvath is former Ohio State All America halfback who now is a fine golfer. He's an 11 handicapper.

Winner of the closest to the pin contest on No. 17 was Gayle D'Arche (South Hills), 7 feet, 3 inches.

Pacifica Recreational Products, which markets Pacifica "Bamboomer" woods and "Soft Touch" irons, has instituted a new campaign paralleling the recent automobile rebate programs.

From April 1 through June 30 the California firm is offering, through its pro shop dealers, gift credits of from $25 to $50 with each purchase of Pacifica sets. The gift credits are redeemable in merchandise at the pro shop. Pacifica then reimburses the pro shop for the value of the redeemed merchandise. Gift credits are redeemable through Aug. 31.

Sellout crowd expects to see an Ali victory

The scheduled 15-round fight at the Coliseum is the second half of a closed-circuit television doubleheader. The opening half will be a 12-round heavyweight bout between Ken Norton and Jerry Quarry at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Promoter Don King predicts a sellout crowd of 22,000 will watch the title fight, which will start about 7:30 p.m., PST.

Ali has said he is not in top condition but that he is in good enough shape to beat Wepner, a liquor salesman from Bayonne, N.J.

The champion is expected to weigh about 225 pounds. He weighed 216½ when he knocked out George Foreman in Zaire to regain the title he had stripped from him when he was convicted of refusing induction into the military.

The 6-foot-5 Wepner, who also is expected to weigh about 225, has won his last eight fights but is not ranked by the World Boxing Association or the World Boxing Council. The WBC has refused to sanction the fight as a title match, which means that even if Ali loses, he will be still recognized as champion by the WBC.

Another reason Ali is a prohibitive betting favorite is the fact that seven of Wepner's losses have been due to cuts, earning him the nickname, "the Bayonne Bleeder."

But Wepner and his manager, Al Braverman, are quick to point out that Wepner has not had a serious cut since he underwent an operation for removal of scar tissue four years ago. In a pro career that started in 1964, Wepner has had more than 200 stitches in his face.

Wepner, who has won 30 fights—12 by knockout—and drawn two, is to get $100,000 for his big chance. His previous biggest purse was $10,000.

Ali, who calls Wepner the White Hope—"It's the only hope he has"—is getting $1.5 million, which is a big pay cut from his previous two fights. He got about $3 million when he outpointed Joe Frazier Jan. 28, 1974, and received $5 million for the Foreman fight.

The champion, who successfully defended the title 10 times before it was stripped from him, will be making his 48th pro fight. He has won 45, 32 by kockout, and lost two.

Ali, who at 33 is two years younger than Wepner, has said that he will give his share of his purse to worthy charitable organizations. The promoters, Don King Productions, Inc., and Video Techniques, Inc., also have said that 50 cents from every ticket sold, both live and television in the United States UNICEF and Africare.

The doubleheader will be seen on closed-circuit television in the United States and Canada and also will be seen live and on a delayed basis in about 100 other countries, King said.

Norton and Quarry are each getting about $200,000 and the winner will remain in contention for a title shot, but not an immediate one.

Reach agreement on San Diego Conquistadors

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Leonard Bloom and United California Bank have reached a compromise on the ownership of the San Diego Conquistadors.

Bloom agreed Thursday to hold off selling the American Basketball Association team. With his consent, a preliminary injunction blocking the sale was signed by San Diego County Superior Court Judge Jack R. Levitt.

In return, the bank agreed not to press its efforts to take the team into receivership for debts owed by Bloom to UCB.

Operation of the Conquistadors had been taken over last month by the other ABA owners, who relieved Bloom of all responsibilites toward the club.

Queen Betty Lee wins C.B. crown

San Bernardino's Betty Lee is the Queen of Citrus Belt ladies bowling!

At least that was the title bestowed upon the tough righthander as she swept past five opponents to win the Citrus Belt Queens Tournament this past weekend at Garey Center Bowl.

While she was most impressive in the finals on Sunday, Mrs. Lee almost packed things up after the six game qualifying test Saturday. Firing a 1082 total (180 average) it looked as if Betty might not make the finals, but she squeaked in by one pin with a score of 1081 needed to reach Sunday's finals.

From there on, things got easier.

Of course she made it easy on herself with some fine bowling, averaging 198 .She won the championship by ousting runner-up Jackie Bryant of Glendora, 187-159. Converting the 5-7 split in the second frame, the eventual champ charged through with a four bagger to lock things up.

First place was worth $175 plus quite a few extras. Mrs. Lee will automatically be seeded into next year's CBWBA Queens Tournament and she received a paid entry into the State Queens as well. To top things off, Betty was presented with a trophy and roses from the association.

Montclair's Connie Tichgelaar, the defending champion, made the finals again and finished seventh for $65. One spot higher was the recent CBWBA all-events winner, Kay Landin of Montclair with $70 earned. Pomona's Ginger Ireland made the finals for $55 while Jean Shearer, Pomona, picked up $35, as did Upland's Freida Spada.

Last week we talked about the upcoming Professional Bowlers Association Western Regional Tournament slated for May 16-17-18 at Del Rosa Bowl in San Bernardino.

If you would like to bowl either with or against the pros that big weekend, it will be very simple to do.

First of all, there will be three Pro-Am squads set up. They are scheduled for Friday night at 7 and 9:30 p.m. with another going Saturday night at 9:30.

Entry fee for the Pro-Am is $15 with one out of every seven entries cashing. And even if you are a low average bowler, the Pro-Am is a great bargain.

You get to bowl with three different pros whose scores act as your partners. And the event is handicapped so everyone has an equal chance to win.

The real thrill is getting to bowl alongside the "Best in the West" and chat with them. This is a fun time for the pros as it represents the only actual "relaxing" bowling they can afford all weekend.

If you think that you could compete on equal footing with the pros — or at least would like to try your skill — then Del Rosa has three scratch sweepers coming up offering spots in the tourney as prizes.

The first of these scratch 10-gamers is set for Saturday midnite, April 19. Entry fee is $20. Subsequent House Spot tourneys will be held Sunday, April 27 at 11 a.m. and Saturday, May 3 at midnite.

Things tightened up somewhat in local league action this past week. In the 940 Matchpoint Classic at Garey Center on Friday nights, Gordy Lindfords fired a 694 series against league leading Automatic Positioner, allowing the rest of the pack to close in. Sub Bill Norman added 668.

At Landmark Bowl, Team No. 2 cooled off dramatically in the 740 Scratch and now enjoys just a one game cushion. Again the league leaders brought out the weekly high from the opposition with Steve Sanchez firing 646.

Dee Swan came about a s close to perfection as possible in the Bowlerettes at the Bowlium. Opening her second game with the first seven strikes, Dee was stopped by an 8-10 split on a good pocket hit. Picking up one, she undauntedly fired tour closing perfectos for a big 266 game. Tacked on to her opening 234 effort, she settled for a 169 third game and a beautiful 669 series.

THINGS TO WATCH — Eastland Lanes, West Covina, will host the American Bowlers Association on Sunday. It runs all day . . . Mini-Tour for 189 and under averagers Sunday at Fon-Ri in Rialto . . . Blue Chip bowling, almost every night on weekends at each local center.

Norton-Quarry fight may be turning point

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Norton, the fourth-ranked heavyweight, and Jerry Quarry, ranked No. 5, meet at Madison Square Garden Monday night in a 12-round bout that could be the turning point in their careers.

Their fight will serve as the closed circuit television appetizer for the Muhammad Ali-Chuck Wepner title fight in Cleveland.

After Norton and Quarry finish their work, a giant four sided screen will be lowered and the Garden fight crowd will watch Ali defend his crown against Wepner in a scheduled 15-round bout at the Cleveland Arena.

Both Qurry and Norton figure their fight could lead to a possible future date for the championship with Ali or, should he score the upset, Wepner.

And upsets have a way of occurring in the heavyweight division.

Norton runs one of boxing's biggest winners, a 12-round decision over Ali two years ago. Ali suffered a broken jaw in that bout, one of only two losses in his career. Norton lost a split decision in a rematch, Ali's first big step on the road to winning back the championship from George Foreman in Zaire five months ago.

Norton has won his last two bouts after being knocked out in a title match against Foreman. In his last fight, he knocked out Reco Brooks last month in Oklahoma City for his 25th career KO. He has won 32 of 35 career bouts.

Monday night's fight will be Norton's first in the Garden, a familiar working spot for Quarry, who has fought there nine times before.

A Californian like Norton, Quarry has a 50-7-4 career log including 29 knockouts. Included among his victories were pivotal Garden knockouts against Mac Foster in 1970 and Earnie Shavers in 1973. Both fighters had impressive records and title ambitions before Quarry derailed them.

Quarry also holds a decision over highly-regarded Ron Lyle. In his last fight, Quarry outpointed Scrap Iron Johnson in 10 rounds at Honolulu last month.

The bout with Johnson marked Quarry's first fight since last June when Joe Frazier knocked him out in the Garden. Quarry also has had two meetings with Ali, losing by a knockout in 1970 and again in 1972.

Both Quarry and Norton are 29 years old and could be approaching the crossroads of their fighting careers. The winner of Monday's bout undoubedly will challenge the Ali-Wepner winner for the title. Whether he gets that fight depends a great deal on Foreman, Frazier, Joe Bugner, who is Ali's next opponent, and the rest of the muddled heavyweight division.

Walton will return—Nater

ST. LOUIS (AP) — In a strange twist of roles, Swen Nater is assuring the sports public that Bill Walton will make it as a professional basketball player.

"His time is coming," said Nater, a burly center for the San Antonio Spurs, who two years ago watched from the bench as Walton starred at UCLA. Walton was the No. 1 draft pick in the National Basketball Association last year, signing with Portland for a reported $3 million.

"He's got a great future. He just had a bad experience this season. But he'll be back," said Nater, the American Basketball Association's Rookie of the Year in 1973-74.

Ironically, during the two centers' college days, it was the controversial Walton who boasted of Nater's prowess, often telling reporters that Nater was the best center he had faced during the Bruins' season.

But Walton's first year in the NBA was a major disappointment and he has undergone criticism from Portland fans and even some of his teammates who felt he was not really trying. The 6-foot-11 center is now sidelined for the season with a bone spur injury.

"When you get paid almost $3 million," he said, "you have to perform. A $50,000-a-year player can do those things and nobody notices. But the people in Portland had great expectations because of Bill. They thought they'd finish first. They bought season tickets. Now, they're disappointed and they blame Bill.

"They feel a little like the kid who expects to go to the circus and then finds out he can't because his mother has a headache. But I don't think Bill is faking it. Here's a guy who came to every practice at UCLA and worked harder than anyone. He got 26 rebounds and about 25 points against the Lakers early in the season. Does that sound like a guy who planned to cheat his team?"

Swim teams conduct tryouts on April 7

The Rowland Heights-Diamond Bar Swim Association will hold team membership tryouts April 7 from 3:30 to 5 p.m. at the Hills Club, 1674 Maple Hill Road, Diamond Bar, and on April 8 from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. at the Rowland Heights Pool, 2000 S. Otterbein Ave.

The association trains swimmers 5 through 18 years of age. Team members participate in AAU swim meets, invitational and dual, A, B and C divisions.

Practices are held at Rowland Heights and the Hills Club. Both outdoor pools are 25 yards long and heated.

Americans are highly mobile people as seen during the early 1970s when nearly 40 million persons moved annually, said Walter C. Arnold, president of the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors.

"The main reason people move, according to a recent study, is for better housing . . . and they seek it in various places," he added.

"We read of a mass exodus to suburbia as people search for better schools and freedom from crime, pollution and traffic congestion.

"And on the other hand, we hear that people are returning to central city areas to avoid costly transportation problems heightened by gasoline shortages and costs and because some suburban areas have imposed growth limitations."

But where are the people going? Arnold said the latest census reports state the nation's 15 largest metropolitan areas gained only 65,000 residents in three years.

More people moved out than in, and the increase was due only to the fact that births exceeded deaths, he added.

"Five of the largest urban complexes actually lost population. By contrast, population in non-metropolitan parts of the U.S. gained 2.3 million."

A recent study by the Urban Land Institute (ULI) found signs of a resurgence in the middle income housing market in five of six metropolitan areas surveyed, said Arnold.

The ULI reported several factors may contribute to the creation of a new city housing market, including the no-growth movement in the suburbs, the energy crisis, an increase in central city area office expansion which will create demand for more places to live, and decreasing marriage and birth rates.

The latter two — which are accompanied by increasing proportions of singles and childless couples — mean that more households will become adult oriented.

There will be less demand for living space where children's needs are most important and more demand for residences convenient to jobs, restaurants and other adult facilities, he noted.

"Whether they're moving into or out of the metropolitan areas, many people move for job related reasons. More than half the 40 million Americans who move each year during the early 1970s did so for reasons related to employment.

"And while there has been reports of cutbacks in employe transfers, analysts say large scale transfers are far from becoming a thing of the past."

In fact, said Arnold, one expert estimates that the average person entering the job market today can expect to move 13 times and to change jobs seven times during his career.

"Wherever you move, and for whatever your reason, one thing is certain, a Realtor can help," said Arnold. "A Realtor can help you sell your present home and find a new one.

"Many Realtors provide referralservice between cities and states. And as professionals in real estate, Realtors are qualified to advise you on location, market conditions and financing."

Most homes sold in new project

If the present sales pace continues, all 52 homes in the Bob Jensen development will be sold before the projected completion date next April.

The homes are located near Teak Way and Base Line Avenue, Alta Loma. The development is one-fourth mile east of Archibald Avenue.

Jensen, owner of Bob Jensen Builder, Inc., said two thrids of the homes have been sold since January.

He attributed the large number of sales to the development location, front lawns, fenced rear yards, kitchens with built-in ovens, ranges and dishwashers, and wall-to-wall carpeting.

The three and four bedroom homes are priced from $29,000 to $32,550. These feature VA and FHA financing at 7-¾ths per cent interest rate and Cal Vet financing.

The model home and sales office is open seven days a week from 11 a.m.

Rabies cases down

Rabies in humans in the United States has decreased from an average 22 cases per year in 1946-1950 to only one or two cases per year since 1963.

50 abandoned homes in valley are sold in sealed bid sale

More than 50 boarded up homes in the Pomona Area were sole recently during a sealed bid sale conducted by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Most of these houses had been abandoned by their initial buyers and were then repossessed by the Federal Housing Administration.

HUD representatives select each week a group of these homes to be sold. Local Realtors then assist by showing them to prospctive buyers and accepting sealed bids which are delivered to the HUD office, sai Walter Arnold, president f the Pomona Valley Board oRealtors.

The sealed ids are then opened at a dignated location, usually Los Angeles, with the succesful bidder determined by th highest bid.

Most homesare sold "as is" on a cashasis, said Arnold. "We find some cases that parents uy the homes for their chiren and are paying cash."

The biggest sales factor, he added, is the homes are a good buy. "They are selling a $20,000 home for $10,000 to $11,000. And most are in good shape."

Based on his own sales experience, Arnold said he has found many buyers plan to move into the houses themselves and many are from outside the valley.

The cooperative program between local Realtors and HUD officials has resulted in many of these abandoned homes being sold.

"We started with about 800 such houses and we are down to about 350 abandoned homes," he reported.

The sealed bid sales are held about six times a month. Arnold said he hopes that at least one such sale a month

"This substantial reduction in repossessed homes has improved the valley's situation and buyers from other areas are investigating and buying here," said Arnold.

These houses are located on Schaefer Avenue between Pipe Line and Ramona avenues, a mile south of Riverside Drive.

"A major appeal of The Countryside is its scenic setting which looks out upon verdant meadows and rolling hills in Chino's west section," said Richad A. Lewis, firm president.

Model homes have been designed in one and two story elevations. Buyers may select from stylings with three and four bedrooms and two or 2½ bathrooms.

Homes are priced from $39,800 to $45,500, with VA, FHA and conventional financing available. Interest rates are as low as 7¾ per cent and 6¼ per cent on Cal Vet terms.

These homes feature wall-to-wall shag carpeting which extend into the bathroom wardrobe closets, window drapes and wood burning fireplaces. Garden kitchens have eating counters, indoor-outdoor serving ledges, ranges, double ovens with self-cleaning lower units, dishwahsers and garbage disposals.

The purchase price includes front yard seedings and sprinklers. The rear and side yards are fenced and have privacy gates.

Hawkins has $175 million sales listed

The Herbert Hawkins Realtors report $175 million in realty sales during 1974.

Included are sales from franchised offices throughout Southern California and Denver, Colo. The total represented transactions on 4,500 properties.

The Alhambra branch topped the roster of more than 50 offices by exceeding $15 million for the year. This is a six per cent gain over 1973.

During 1974, Charles Hoffman, Robert Irish and James Maroney were named regional managers in the San Fernando Valley, Cerritos-Long Beach and Denver.

Eight sales offices were opened in San Fernando Valley, two in Denver and 10 in Orange County. Also a new company owned office opened in Altadena last fall with Tom Joyce named as manager.

Jim Papararo, vice president and general manager, said he expects an improved market for 1975 and his firm will continue a nationwide expansion program which includes immediate plans for new offices in Glendale, San Diego and Salt Lake City.

He cites the government's $9 billion support of the VA and FHA loan programs as a strong boost for the resale housing market. This has resulted in lower interest rates and down payments.

An amendment to the Veterans Housing Act to give "second time around" eligibility for home loans is seen as an added incentive. Some veterans can now quality for loans up to $70,000 with no down payments, he said.

Mark III building homes near Upland

One and two story homes with views of the San Bernardino Mountains are being built in north Upland by Mark III Homes.

Thirty-seven homes are nearing completion and workers have begun clearing the site for 54 more homes.

When the development is completed, the 70 acre site near Mountain Avenue and 16th Street will have 260 detached homes.

Officials reported that 27 of the 37 homes in the first unit have been sold.

Buyers have a choice of various exterior styles and four different floorplans. The three and four bedroom homes are priced from $43,495 to $51,495. Financing is handled by the United California Bank.

"At Mark III Homes, the quality has been built-in," said Steven Sanberg, president of the building firm, "We have used the best materials throughout to insure a fine living environment to the complete satisfaction of our buyers."

Deep overhangs provide a covered entry with long roof lines that dramatize the overall dimensions of pilasters, arches and oversized windows.

Two floorplans have wood burning fireplaces in the living room and the other two have the fireplaces in the large family rooms.

The homes also feature cathedral ceilings, separate family rooms, formal dining rooms, large kitchens, master bedroom suites, convertible dens, two and three bathrooms, double attached garages with automatic door openers and fenced rear yards. yards.

Some homes also include wet bars, smoke detector systems, intercoms with AM-FM radio, separate laundry facilities, and pass-through windows to the patio areas. Some patios are also plumbed for gas barbecues.

"Upland retains a small town atmosphere," said Kathy Hone, sales manager. "There are still vast citrus orchards along the northern edge of town, the people are friendly and it's an excellent family environment."

FUN FACTS

FROM WRIGLEY'S JUICY FRUIT GUM

TCHAIKOVSKY'S CAREER WAS FINANCED BY A WOMAN HE NEVER MET.

DURING A CHILD'S GROWTH, ITS HEAD DOUBLES IN SIZE, ITS ARMS BECOME FOUR TIMES AS LONG, LEGS FIVE TIMES AS LONG, AND TRUNK, THREE TIMES AS LONG.

THERE ARE ONLY 400 $10,000 BILLS IN CIRCULATION TODAY.

IT TAKES ABOUT 2 TONS OF ROSE PETALS TO MAKE ONE POUND OF OIL FOR PERFUME.

Pick a pack of Juicy Fruit Gum

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — I sewed patch-pockets on the inside of a cardigan sweater. Now I have a place to carry my keys when I do not want to carry a purse. Necessity is so often the mother of invention. — CLARA.

DEAR POLLY — When on vacation, my mother always puts COLORED pillowcases on the pillows we carry in the car. We are not so likely to mix them up when carried into a motel and used with the motel's white-covered pillows. — CHRIS.

Polly pays $1.00 for every idea used. Send them to her, c/o this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — Here's how to keep warmer when the thermometer is set at 65-68 degrees: An extra pair of wool sleeves (under a blouse) is a great help. I cut the sleeves from an old sweater and pin them to the top of my bra straps with tiny safety pins. For a tighter-fitting blouse I use a pair of nonrun mesh stockings with the feet cut off. — Pat.

DEAR POLLY — To save money on dish towels, we recycle used, medium-weight bath towels that are too thin for using after a bath. Mark each towel into three sections crosswise, zigzag stitch on each side of the lines and then cut between the stitching. Turn hems and stitch down. — MRS.C.H.V.

DEAR POLLY — To make a quick-and-easy bookholder, pull the lower bar of a wire coat hanger into a V shape, turn up towards the top and then bend the hook part back. — CHRISTINE.

DEAR POLLY — After cooking food with an unpleasant odor, I boil one tablespoon vanilla with a little water. After a few minutes the kitchen smells sweet and clean again. — ANN.

© 1975 by NEA, Inc.

DEAR POLLY — The tubes that come in paper towels can be slit lengthwise and two slipped side-by-side over the bar on a wire coat hanger. Covered with adhesive-backed paper, they make nice hangers for slacks.. — CHARLOTTE.

Polly's note — When away from home and short of skirt hangers, a section of newspaper hung over the wire also works well.

DEAR POLLY — To eliminate annoying stains on my hands from scraping carrots, I rub a half-teaspoon of salad oil on my palms and fingers before starting to scrape. The salad oil washes off in soapy water in a jiffy. — ANNE.

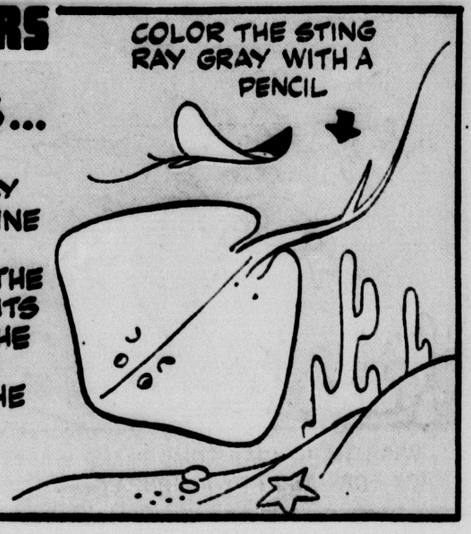
STING RAYS...

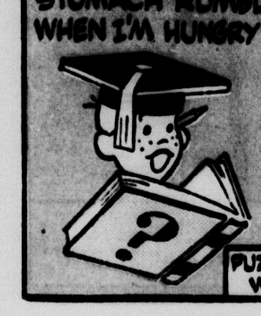
THE STING RAY'S STINGER IS REALLY A SHARP, BONY SPINE ON ITS LONG TAIL. WHEN DISTURBED, THE STING RAY WHIPS ITS TAIL ABOUT AND THE POISONOUS SPINE IS DRIVEN INTO THE VICTIM'S FLESH.



THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:

MIKE BURK OF PAWHUSKA, OK, ASKS:

"WHY DOES MY STOMACH RUMBLE WHEN I'M HUNGRY?"



WHEN YOU EAT, POWERFUL MUSCLES IN THE WALLS OF THE STOMACH CHURN THE FOOD AND THOROUGHLY MIX IT WITH DIGESTIVE JUICES. YOU USUALLY HAVE YOUR MEALS AT THE SAME TIME EACH DAY. THE CHURNING ACTION OF THE STOMACH TENDS TO BEGIN AT YOUR MEALTIMES. WITH NOTHING IN YOUR STOMACH TO DIGEST, THE CHURNING ACTION CAN SOMETIMES GET NOISY AND YOU SAY YOUR STOMACH IS "GROWLING."

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR POLLY BERGEN

Did you start off as a singer?—B.B., Lowell, Mass.

● Correct. When I was 16, I got a job singing on a Pasadena radio station. I was soon fired because of a flood of complaints from listeners. This is what happened: I sang a country-western lullaby ("Go to Sleep My Little Buckaroo"), and all the ladies were furious because instead of their children going to sleep, their husbands became very "interested" in me. It seems my voice—which was always low and husky—was too sexy and suggestive.

FOR BART STARR, head coach of the Green Bay Packers

How do you feel about the football tradition that says ex-quarterbacks don't make good head coaches in the National Football League?—Roger Davidson, Durham, N.C.

● I intend to bury that next to the one that said a black man couldn't play quarterback in the National Football League.

FOR KITTY CARLISLE, panelist on "To Tell the Truth"

● Yes. The reason I have so many is because I never throw any of them away. You see, I haven't gained an inch or an ounce in 30 years, so all my clothes still fit. I don't get rid of anything because I know if you wait long enough, everything eventually comes back into fashion again.

FOR JASON MILLER, star of "The Nickel Ride"

Do you think most actors come to admire the characters they're playing?—J.N., Ogden, Utah

● "Understand" might be the better word. When I played the priest in "The Exorcist," I was one jump ahead, because I was strictly raised as an Irish-Catholic. Many actors portray murderers and criminals, and I'm sure they don't "admire" them. But if they research the character, they get to "understand" what makes the character tick, and so are able to give the role much more realism.

FOR RON NESSEN, presidential press secretary

Could a woman do your job?—Robert Barney, San Antonio, Texas

● Definitely. As a matter of fact, President Ford has just appointed Mrs. Margita White, formerly of the Nixon press team, to be an assistant press secretary.

FOR HARRY KEMELMAN,
author of "Tuesday the Rabbi Saw Red" and other books

I'm surprised that your "Rabbi" series hasn't been filmed yet. Why?—Kathy Ryan, E. Freetown, Maine

● So am I! What's even more surprising is that the series was purchased way back in 1965. A number of scripts have been written—and rejected—and various actors proposed for the lead. The film, if it ever gets off the ground, is based on the first book, "Friday the Rabbi Slept Late." There is also some TV interest. Keep your fingers crossed.

FOR SUSAN FORD

Why do you always wear blue jeans? Do your friends treat you differently now that you're the daughter of the President?—L.A., Durham, N.C.

● I wear blue jeans because I really do like them. And I still have the same friends I had before we moved to the White House. We still have the same kind of fun together.

FOR TRISH VAN DEVERE

Did you ever regret becoming an actress?—L.E., Asbury Park, N.J.

● Only once, when I was 16 and in summer stock. I had always wanted to go to Europe and that was the year my friends decided to go. I couldn't join them because of my stage commitment. My only consolation was that they didn't send me glowing postcards from exotic places. When they got back, they told me, "We had a dreadful time, and you didn't miss a thing by not coming with us."

FOR HOWARD K. SMITH, "ABC Evening News"

Were you angered by the "protesters" who interrupted your program last October?—Terry Davis, Alma, Ark.

● I was certainly angry that supporters of a fanatical terrorist movement used our news program to propagate their bloody cause. However, since one was a priest, I asked the police to release them. I suggested to the priest that his conscience should punish him for helping create a hell on earth for the children of Northern Ireland. If he had no conscience, he would look on arrest as martyrdom, which would serve no purpose but to reinforce his fanaticism.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

● He's always serious when he's working or doing something that's important to him—like acting, writing or playing the clarinet. When he's relaxed he likes to clown around. Not too well known is that Woody Allen's second love is sports. He plays in New York's Broadway Softball League in the summer and keeps in shape during the winter by playing tennis. Actor Tony Roberts, now starring on Broadway in "Absurd Person Singular," is a good friend of Woody's. He says Woody's strongest points in tennis are his outfit and serve—both of which are designed to cripple his opponent with laughter. His usual garb on the courts is a multicolored T-shirt, oversized boxer shorts reaching to his knees, unmatched Argyle socks and dirty brown sneakers with white laces.

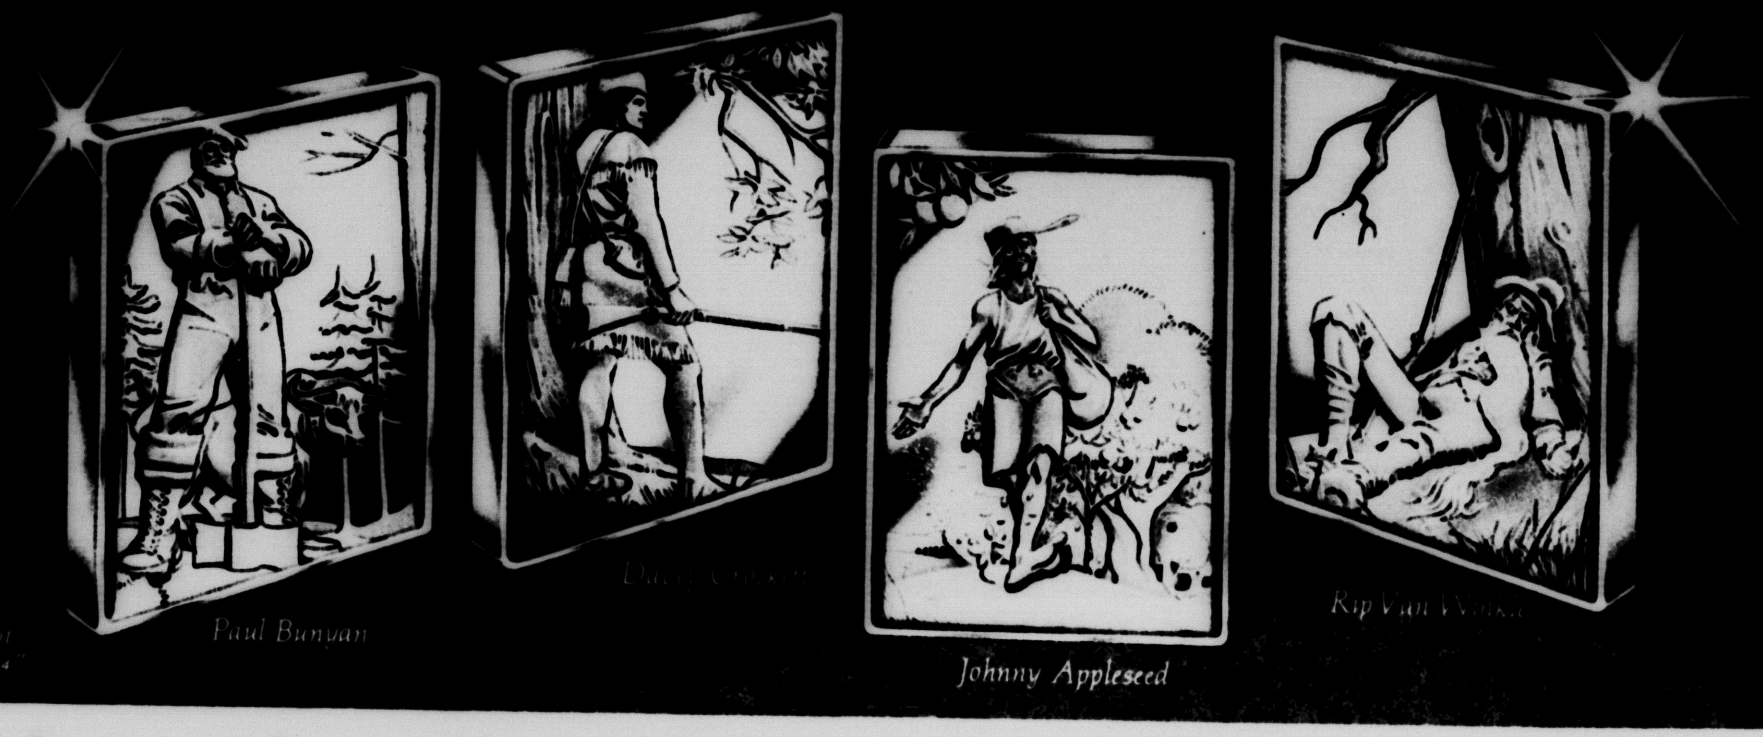
"They were the beginning of our past"

THE HAMILTON MINT TREASURY OF AMERICAN FOLKLORE



A chain set of each ingot is 1¼" x 1¾"

Edition is limited to only 10,000 proof finish solid silver ingot sets—when these are gone, there'll be no more!

A Strictly Limited First Edition Series of 24 Ingots in .999 Fine Silver Only $13.75 per Ingot

For more than two centuries we Americans have passed along in songs and stories, the fantastic feats of our folk heroes—men, bigger than life, who could "kill a bar" with bare hands, shoot the eye out of a hawk in flight or fell an oak with one stroke of a double-bitted ax.

The most famous figures of American folklore, real and fictional, are in this new fine art series. Included are: Paul Bunyan; Davey Crockett; Johnny Appleseed; Rip Van Winkle; Wyatt Earp and Casey Jones—plus the other great characters who have been loved and immortalized by Americans for 200 years by the telling and retelling of their stories.

OUR RICH FOLK HERITAGE PRESERVED IN SOLID SILVER

To commemorate our famous American Folk Heroes, The Hamilton Mint will issue a first edition series of twenty four ingots—each will be a glorious example of the engraver's art and each will contain 480 grains of .999 fine silver, the finest and purest available. All will be gleaming proof finish ingots. The 24 superbly crafted ingots will be issued at the rate of two a month for 12 months. At the end of that time subscribers will have amassed over 11,000 grains of silver—more than the average person accumulates in a lifetime.

A STRICTLY LIMITED FIRST EDITION

Only 10,000 first edition sets in proof finish pure silver will ever be minted. And, only one complete proof set will be issued to each subscriber. Once the edition limits have been reached, the dies for these ingots will be destroyed . . . thus establishing forever the rarity and integrity of this fine collection.

YOUR OWN PERSONAL SERIAL NUMBER

Each proof-finish ingot in your collection will be minted expressly for you. Each will carry your exclusive matching serial number along with the hallmark of The Hamilton Mint, an acknowledged mark of excellence for fine medallic art.

You will also receive a signed Certificate of Authenticity attesting to the limited edition status and precious metal content of your collection.

INVESTMENT POTENTIAL WITH GUARANTEED PRICE PROTECTION

When your application is accepted by The Hamilton Mint, your original purchase price of $13.75 for each pure silver ingot is guaranteed for the entire series—even though the price of Silver and Gold may climb in the international metals market. This guarantee is particularly significant because it comes at a time when leading economists are predicting continued increases in the price of precious metals in the years ahead.

The Hamilton Mint does reserve the right to limit the edition below the published maximums but once your application is accepted, your subscription is guaranteed.

Presentation Case Included Free!

Each subscriber to the series will receive a specially designed presentation case that combines the luxurious appearance of finely crafted wood with lucite. Sturdy construction permits you to display as well as protect your valuable collection.

The 24 Kt. Gold on Pure Silver Archive Collection

The exquisite detail of these finely sculptured ingots is brought out even more, and the set made even more desirable, with a layer of 24 Kt. Gold. This special archive edition is being limited to only 5,000 . . . making this edition quite rare. Each ingot will be individually serially numbered and hallmarked, and will cost just $18.75.

THE HAMILTON MINT, LOCATED IN ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, ILLINOIS, IS THE WORLD'S 2ND LARGEST PRIVATE MINT

A Writer, A Lawyer, A Doctor, An Athlete, An Actor:

Family Weekly Takes a New Look At the Agony of Divorce

By Helen Dorsey

Barbara Howar, Washington author who hit the best-seller lists with her "Laughing All the Way," scoffs at the usual agonies of divorce, "especially in a time when divorce is as common as it is! Why should people feel they have failed? I think people would rather say they made a mistake! Frankly, the worst thing about divorce are our archaic divorce laws. Get rid of them and we'll have much less trouble!

"My husband and I had an 'amicable divorce.' By the time his lawyer said, 'Are you going to let her get away with that?' and my lawyer said, 'You've got to grab this,' then it became an expensive negotiation. We could have worked it out ourselves.

"God knows I went through the worst guilt: thinking I was depriving the children of their father. But you go about your business and you do the best you can." Barbara strongly believes in Margaret Mead's theory that children can be happy and normal being raised by several people as long as they feel loved and get quantities of the right kind of attention. "These children get a lot of attention and love from their father. When they're with me, they get my undivided attention. They also get a lot of love and attention from their stepmother, in-laws, cousins and friends. It's almost like a commune. They get affection and direction from several responsible people rather than just two.

"Above all, children need to know you care about them and love them. You have only to work a little harder and not take them for granted." Barbara has lived through the agony of almost having her children taken away from her. "I value them and never take them for granted. I don't say I treat them like crown jewels! I don't take them out and polish them and tell them how great they are all the time, only when they deserve it. They are not pandered to."

Barbara says that she and her ex-husband have "no power struggle. When my daughter complains about the way her father disciplines her, I say, 'That's your daddy's way of thinking. You're going to have to deal with him on his own terms.' In fact, I think shifting children back and forth between two parents—if it's properly done—can help to prepare them for the topsy-turvy world in which they live. Their preparation is better than that of the child who comes out of the neat nest where everything is firm and happy! That's the trap of middle-America marriages. Luckily, I happen to have very resourceful children. My 12-year-old says, 'We've been divorced since I was six.' "

"The problem with most divorce cases is that one day you may be confronted by a client who wants every rough measure that the law permits immediately put into force. And the same client will come back the next week saying, 'Why are you picking on my husband?' "—F. Lee Bailey

F. Lee Bailey, the famous criminal lawyer, says he finds handling divorce cases "agonizing and frustrating. My office very rarely takes on divorce cases and only if it's a favor for someone," says Bailey. "First of all, I don't think lawyers belong anywhere near divorce cases. They don't do their clients much good. In fact, they can do them a great deal of harm.

"Lawyers will get two parties together who could probably sit down together and settle their differences and instead get them to reach a separation. In their anxiety to appear to have done a good deal for their clients, they just cause a wider breach between them. But the problem with most divorce cases is that one day you may be confronted by a client who wants every rough measure that the law permits immediately put into force. And the same client will come back the next week saying, 'Why are you picking on my husband?'

"Uncertainty is the greatest problem for people seeking a divorce. So often they don't really know what they want. They come to us not to solve a legal problem but to make a decision as to what it is they want." Bailey feels that "psychological counseling may be the answer. Everyone who is wrapped up in a divorce case wants all the friends he can get for reassurance. So often the lawyer is supposed to fulfill that role as well."

Dr. David Reuben, author of "Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About Sex . . . ," says of psychotherapy: "Quite honestly, psychiatric treatment should not be the treatment or the approach or first resort in divorce or potential divorce. It's far more sensible for the average person to try to come to grips with his own problems. It's very much like the mother who rushes her child to the doctor at the first sign of a runny nose. That does not help the child develop immunity to disease or to deal realistically with his problems.

"Divorced people who take themselves off like basket cases to the psychiatrist are copping out. They are simply shifting the responsibility to somebody else. There's really no substitute for being honest with yourself."

The greatest agony of the psychiatrist is "constantly being on guard against becoming emotionally involved with the patient's problems. Once you identify with the patient's agonies, you're trapped." He finds the whole concept of "no-fault divorce" is often greatly distorted. "The responsibility is easily 50-50, or maybe 60-40, but seldom goes beyond that. Seldom is there a situation where a psychiatrist can honestly say, 'I've got a poor patient who is the victim of a scheming wife, or this lady has a cruel brute for a husband.' In very subtle, very unconscious ways, everyone contributes to the mutual destruction of a marriage.

"The psychiatrist must avoid the pitfall of thinking his patient is the innocent one, because it's never that way. And for you to think that way and convince your patient to think that way (it doesn't take much coaxing) can only do a great deal of harm."

Tennis pro Bobby Riggs enjoys being a swinging bachelor, shies away from marrying again. Yet at first, he says, "I felt so terribly lonely, I was almost beside myself. I felt I had to have somebody who needed me just to prove to myself somebody still wanted me. I cut out an interesting piece from the newspaper and sent it to my son, asking him to send it to his mother. It was about the pangs and readjustments a man has to make, especially when the woman initiated the divorce, which was what happened in my case.

Bobby Riggs

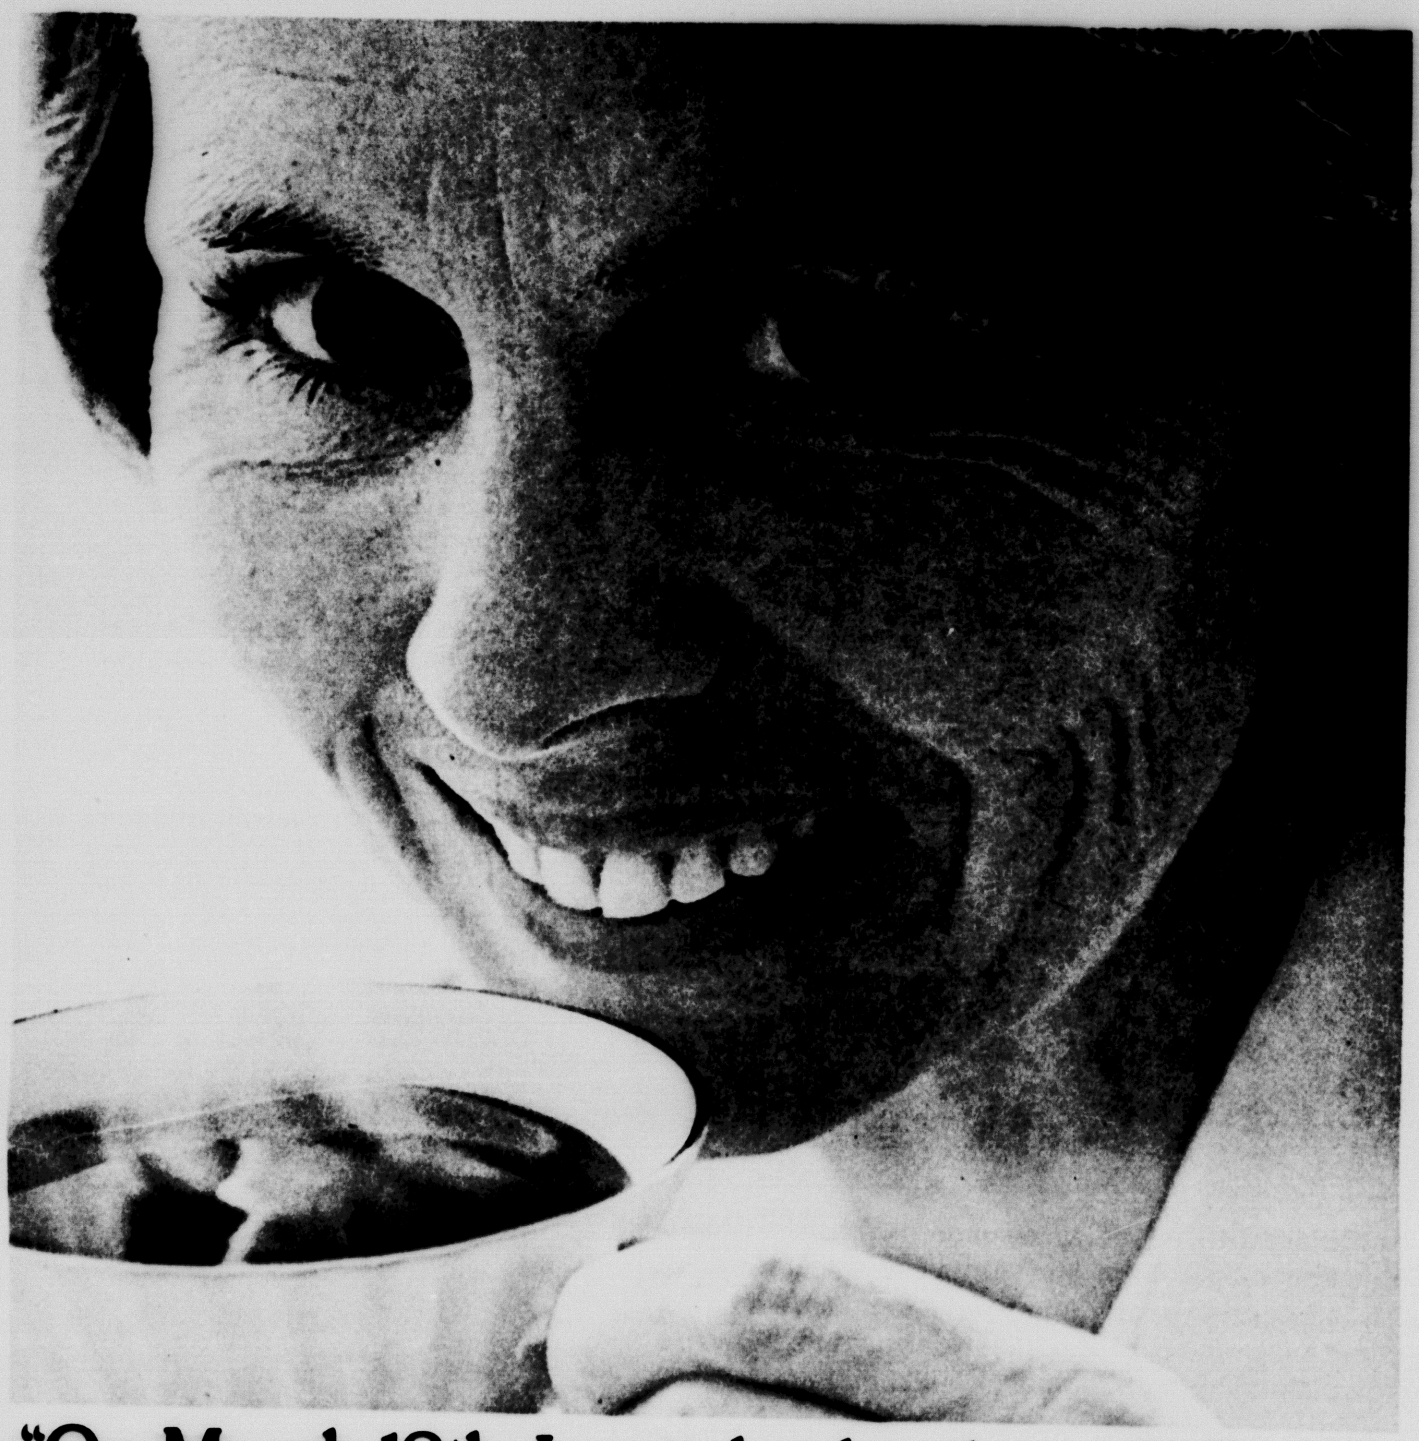
"The first couple of years I had several very nice lady friends. Each relationship lasted about six months. I'm over the real rough spots now. I've even come around to the place where I like the companionship of many women. All in all, I've been married for 33 years—13 years for one marriage and 20 years for the second. But, believe it or not, now I'm beginning to think I'm not the marrying kind. Maybe I was meant to be a bachelor all along!"

Peter Finch feels the degree of agony in divorce has a great deal to do with the age at which one gets the divorce. "It's much more agonizing for a woman than a man, and the older she is, the more desperate she feels. Whereas, if she's a young woman, she says, 'Well, I'll suffer, but I can make it again!'

Peter Finch

"My greatest agony is the sense of failure. I suppose that's true with both parties. Then there's the period where you miss the habit of being with someone more than you miss the person." The twice-divorced actor says that he often wonders what happened to his marriages. "There's always a kind of self-incrimination if you're really honest, because it's always two people's fault, not just the other one."

He remains "good friends" with his first wife, Tamara, who has never remarried. But he says that "in neither case—maybe because of the sort of women I married—did I go through the terrible emotional business so many other people do. I guess in that way maybe I'm lucky."



"On March 18th, I switched to the rich flavor of MJB. Why? Because it's important to me to get a rich cup of coffee everytime. Thank you, MJB."

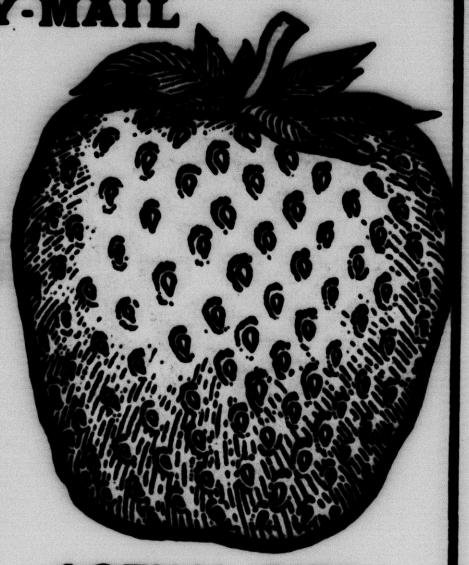
Why be satisfied with ordinary-sized strawberries when we guarantee you can have these extra sweet.....

EXTRA HUGE STRAWBERRIES



25 for $1.95 (50 for $ 3.75) (100 for $ 5.95) (200 for $10.95)

The last time you picked strawberries — or bought them — how many did it take to make a quart? Eighty? One Hundred? More? Regular strawberries are so small — most people lose count! But with this hardy variety, you can expect quarts FROM JUST 30 STRAWBERRIES! And these extra-sweet berries, Giant Robinson, are highly disease resistant, they ripen very fast, plus they produce lots of new runners to give you a bigger patch every year! Have wonderful big strawberries for jams, freezer, fresh desserts for months! You receive strong, healthy plants with well developed crowns and roots. Sorry, not shipped to Arizona.

ACTUAL SIZE!

CAUTION! The most frequently noted "complaint" on these marvelous berries is that most people just didn't think to order enough! Honestly, you will want to order at least 50 of these plants to start — even for smaller patches.

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

City or Country: Is One Better Than the Other?

True or False: If a country boy wants to make a name for himself, his best bet is to move to a big city. (See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. People who were raised in the country have the happiest childhood memories.
2. There are two sides to the much-argued question of whether small-town or big-city life is most conducive to psychological well-being.
3. Whether children do better in school in an urban or in a rural area depends to a large extent on what part of the nation they live in.
4. If a country boy wants to make a name for himself, his best bet is to move to a big city.
5. Country life is better for people of retirement age.
6. Country people have more friends than city people.

ANSWERS

1. True—according to a Social Science Research study in which 100 persons ranging in age from 65 to 92 were interviewed by researchers "who encouraged them to reminisce about childhood and to assess their childhood as predominantly happy or unhappy." The findings: The people with a happy childhood tended to be those who had been reared in a rural setting.

2. True. As one university study evaluating the results of leading investigations shows, "A comparison of mental illness in rural and urban areas indicates a greater incidence in areas with a high population density." And it's pointed out that individuals in big cities are exposed to more situations involving fear, anger and other stress-producing stimuli that frequently have ill effects on mental and emotional well-being. But there is also another side of the coin. An extensive study sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health and the Foundations Fund for Psychiatric Research indicates that many people find the small town's "prying eyes and clacking tongues" oppressive, and that for them the city's more tolerant attitude provides marked psychological benefits.

3. True. Sociological studies show that in some areas "only 40 percent of the rural students are performing academically to capacity compared to over 50 percent of urban students . . . and that grade averages were consistently lower for the rural subjects." However, similar studies of rural and urban schools conducted in the Midwest showed that the rural students not only averaged better grades than city children but had better attitudes toward education in general.

4. False—as evidenced by sociological studies at Michigan State University over a ten-year period, which evaluated the progress of young men from rufal areas. Results: "Those who migrated to small cities exhibited the highest occupational attainment, followed by migrants to large cities; migrants to other rural areas ranked third."

5. True—in a great many respects. As one team of investigators has observed, rural life offers more healthful living for older people than urban environments simply because of the fresh air, sunshine, lack of congestion and the simplicity of life. However, many rural areas do have disadvantages, such as inadequate medical facilities. And this may account for the fact that studies of some rural areas indicated a higher incidence of ailments and afflictions in older persons than for the same age bracket among city dwellers.

6. True—at least so far as young people are concerned, as shown by Kansas State University studies, in which men and women students (married and single) were interviewed as to the number of persons they considered to be close friends. Results: Students from rural areas averaged appreciably more friends than students from metropolitan areas. This was believed due to the fact that "they feel more an intimate part of their total home community than do urban youth."

Jobmanship

Where Your Hidden Office Enemies Come From

When you're promoted to a new position or move on to a new company, you may be astonished to discover you have some ready-made enemies. The better you understand what produces such behavior, the more easily you can locate your secret opponents, anticipate their actions and cope. In his American Management Associations' books on business life, Elton T. Reeves points out that ambush hatreds are usually caused by: 1) Jealousy. Your enemy would shoot at anyone holding your job. He, himself, isn't qualified to do the work, yet he'd like to be in your position. Fortunately, this type of jealousy usually leads the attacker into indiscriminate criticism that is clearly untrue. 2) Revenge. This kind of enemy is qualified for your job but was unable to obtain it. By discrediting you, he hopes to push you out and make another try for it. 3) Pride. There's the possibility that someone who has a say voted against your getting the job. Now his pride is involved and he's determined to see you fail so that his original judgment will be vindicated. Add to Reeves' list: 4) That's not the way I did it. Your work style is different from that of someone who once held your job or a similar one. Therefore, you must be "wrong" and "incompetent." 5) You're not going to show me up. You're obviously competent and a threat to the status quo. How to handle these enemies: Where you can, turn your enemy into an ally by proving to him that your success will benefit his job future. The more smoothly you can disarm your opponent, the better. Most bosses don't value the employee who churns up the work scene as the center of a personality battle.

Painful elimination is unnatural.

Many people have experienced the pain of dry, hard stools. And many have come to accept this, as if it were a natural part of elimination.

But there's nothing natural about it.

And Serutan makes this possible.

Serutan is the effective laxative that forms a smooth gel in the lower digestive tract, where it combines with intestinal waste to give you comfortable relief There's no strain, and no cramps. That's because Serutan, with its natural ingredients, adds the necessary moisture and bulk to work with your system for smooth, easy results.

If you suffer from painful elimination due to constipation or dry, hard stools, try Serutan. You'll be very comfortable with it.

Smart Cooking For Special Occasions

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen cooks Savory Fish Steaks With Fresh Vegetables & Herbs. "It's perfect for this time of year," says Marilyn. "Best of all, it's low-calorie and low-cholesterol."

Savory Fish Steaks For Lent

SAVORY FISH STEAKS
With Fresh Vegetables & Herbs

- 2 cups thinly sliced onions
- 2 cups thinly sliced zucchini or celery leaves
- 2 cups coarsely chopped tomatoes
- 2½ lbs. salmon, halibut or cod steaks or 2 (2-lb. size) bluefish, split and dressed
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh basil leaves or ½ teaspoon dried basil leaves
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley or 1½ teaspoons parsley flakes
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- ½ cup imported olive oil

1. Preheat oven to 375° F. Line a 15x10x1-inch baking pan with foil, or use a large oven-to-table shallow baking dish without foil.

2. Scatter vegetables evenly in pan. Arrange fish steaks over vegetables. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, basil, parsley and lemon juice. Pour olive oil evenly over all.

3. Cover with foil and bake 45-55 minutes, or until fish is opaque and flakes easily when tested with a fork and vegetables are tender.

Makes 6 servings

Does Your Antacid Upset Your Low-Salt Diet?

The leading antacid roll tablet may be giving you more than half your daily sodium allowance. Here's what to do!

If you're worried about salt in your diet—a case of heartburn or acid indigestion can present a real problem.

You should know that just five tablets of the leading roll antacid taken during the day would exceed more than half the allowance of sodium many doctors recommend for strict low-salt diets.

That's playing it pretty close.

And that's why you ought to know about Bisodol® Tablets. Bisodol absorbs more excess acid than the leading roll brand —yet contains far less sodium.

And though Bisodol Tablets quickly relieve that miserable heartburn and acid indigestion, it's good to know you can take them whenever you need them—without worrying about sodium.

Pick up some Bisodol Tablets today. Remember—Bisodol Tablets are low in sodium... high in acid-absorbing power.

Honest answers about that itch you never dared to ask about.

Even your best friend doesn't know. Vaginal and rectal itching make you feel so helpless. So alone.

Let BiCOZENE® help. (Say it "By-Co-Zeen.") This may be the most effective treatment for personal itching you can buy without prescription.

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieves Pain And Itch...

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® —the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make bowel movements more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

Toddlers and Psychotherapy: What's Being Done–And Why

By Alan D. Haas

The records show that Lee Harvey Oswald exhibited signs of emotional disturbance at age two and a half, frequently running away from the homes of a baby-sitter and an aunt. Would the assassination of President Kennedy have taken place if Oswald had been sent to a psychiatrist as a child? "No one can say for sure," asserts Dr. Gilbert Kliman, director of the Center for Preventive Psychiatry at White Plains, N.Y. "But Oswald was a child who should have been given preventive help."

Psychic wounds, Freud said, most often begin in childhood. Psychiatrists and psychotherapists still believe this. Yet, oddly enough, mental-health professionals have been reluctant to treat young children who have been subjected to traumatic events and bad environments. Perhaps part of the blame also goes to parents who excuse their children's unstable behavior by saying things like: "Oh, it's a phase Johnny's going through. He'll outgrow it."

But what if Johnny doesn't outgrow it–or worse, if his neuroses outgrow Johnny and overwhelm him? More and more therapists are coming to believe that treating tots, even at age three, may prevent years of suffering later. "There is no sure way to immunize against mental illness," says Dr. Kliman, "but at least some of the risks are preventable through early psychotherapy."

Certain experiences in the life of any small child are a high risk to his mental health. High on the danger list, says Dr. Kliman, are these:

- The death of a parent
- Divorce
- Abandonment
- Alcoholic or drug-addicted fathers or mothers
- Any kind of severe mental, physical or even sexual abuse

Here are the symptoms Dr. Kliman looks for:

- Repeated nightmares
- Bad eating habits
- Overly aggressive traits
- Failure to develop normal social or language patterns

Frederic Lewis

"Children cannot tolerate painful emotions very long or well without reliable support," Dr. Kliman says. "But therapy can be more successful with young children. Their problems are lesser and the children offer less resistance to treatment."

The Center for Preventive Psychiatry sends therapists into surrounding communities to tell parents and teachers how to recognize potentially troublesome behavior in the very young, and it seeks out children who manifest such disturbances. In some cases, parents also receive treatment at the center. One father and his three children–ages three, seven and ten–received several months of therapy to help them adjust to the fact that the mother was dying of cancer. "As a result," Dr. Kliman says, "they learned there was no need to pretend that everything was fine. The mother's death, after that, did not come as so much of a shock."

One of the most alarming responses to tragedy is no response at all. If a child is absolutely unflapped by the death of a parent, it means a powerful defensive reaction has been set in motion.

One of the most alarming responses to tragedy, according to the doctor, is no response at all. "If a child is absolutely unflapped by the death of a parent," he says, "it means a pathologically powerful defensive reaction has been set in motion."

One child who is being treated at the Center for Preventive Psychiatry is four-year-old Jimmy, a class clown who incited other children to beat him up and provoked his teachers. He would sometimes run into the street, dangerously near automobiles, although he was thought by his family not to know that his mother had killed herself with an automobile. In therapy, he revealed intense rage at his mother for dying and depriving him of the good, loving care she had given him. Following much treatment he can now play and learn in a regular school.

Dr. Kliman is particularly interested in orphaned children. Youngsters who lose one or both parents at any early age run a risk several times greater than normal of suffering some form of mental depression as adults. He cites the case of Richard, eight, whose father had died and whose brother had married. Richard's sister had left for college, and his mother took a job that required some travel. All this loss and separation left the lad overwhelmed, and it was not surprising he was failing in school, was immature for his age, restless–and suffered many related symptoms.

"The personality is very vulnerable at an early age," says Dr. Kliman. He believes that too many parents as well as mental-health professionals have tended to gloss over this vulnerability and to ignore antisocial symptoms. When the antisocial behavior persists, Dr. Kliman feels, and normal adjustments are impeded, then treatment is indicated. "Nevertheless," he says, "we still lack proof that mental illness can be prevented."

The work of the Center for Preventive Psychiatry may help gather some of that missing evidence. One thing seems clear already: A lot of preschool children who need help aren't getting it. The country needs more professionals like Dr. Kliman.

HERE'S WINSTON
The mystery dog

According to local folklore, the reason that Winston, a shy Labrador, lives at this particular crossroad in England is because he lost his master in a car crash at the same spot three years ago. Since then, he has become something of a mythological mascot for the local townspeople. Sometimes he trots off to the local hospital, wanders around the grounds, then returns to the crossroad. People in the neighborhood have been puzzled for years. Nobody knows who built him a fiber-glass doghouse (just out of sight, to the left). For that matter, nobody knows why he answers to the name Winston. "We see no reason to move him on," says a local policeman. "He's not a danger to traffic. I see the dog a lot and he's got more road sense than most humans."

QUOTE: "Jacob Franks, the father of little Bobby Franks, who was brutally murdered by Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb in Chicago, carried his bitterness against his son's murderers to the grave. His will set aside money for a lawyer to protest, if ever the murderers came up for parole. Said the Franks will: 'A lenient governor, a shrewd lawyer—there are many ways they could be put at liberty.' But Loeb was murdered in prison by another inmate. Leopold, who was always considered to have been a tool in Loeb's hands, became a model prisoner, and became such an expert on the handling and reading of X rays he was considered invaluable by the prison, and was much respected. Even Jacob Franks probably would not have objected when Leopold was finally released from prison, after 30-odd years, and moved to Puerto Rico, where he died." From "Wills: A Dead Giveaway," by Millie Considine and Ruth Pool (Doubleday, $6.95). UNQUOTE.

BOB BARKER
His favorite "consequence"

Bob Barker, who makes a living putting people through funny paces, recalls with relish his favorite happening on the "Truth or Consequences" show: "Once we had it fixed so a contestant had to park a convertible in an area where he'd touch the bumper of a small car ahead of him. That car, which was small enough to slip completely under the rear chute of a cement truck in front of it, triggered the cement to spill down into the open car. The man, of course, got out, but you can imagine his reaction! But even funnier, to me, was the actor we hired to play the owner of the car the man was parking. He came out and ad-libbed, 'What are you going to do? My car is full of cement and my lunch is in there!' "

TV DINNERS

A TV dinner doesn't yet
Mean gnawing on a TV set,
But I foresee that such is coming—
A thought, indeed, that's rather numbing.
No need to thaw this TV dinner,
Just turn it on, and it's a winner.
Until it warms itself, one munches
A tuning button—how it crunches.
Soap operas are next. Once swallowed,
They're by a bloody Western followed,
Then riblike bits of solid state
And crispy tubes that should be great,
And lastly wires that criss and cross
And serve one well as dental floss.

We were giving ourselves a family treat by eating in a rather ritzy restaurant. As we sat waiting for our order, I was quite proud of how nicely our three children were behaving. 'A CANTATA FOR PASSOVER'

Theodore Bikel (center) sings a modern musical composition in honor of Passover.

The memory
The history
Of the age old fight Against slavery . . ."
From "The Fifth Cup"

Theodore Bikel stars in the television premiere of a contemporary musical work based on a religious theme, "The Fifth Cup—A Cantata for Passover," on ABC News' Directions series, Sunday at 12 noon. To help celebrate the Jewish holiday of Passover, which commemorates the Israelites' release from bondage at the hands of the Egyptians, Directions presents highlights from this contemporary musical Seder. Written and composed by Norman Simon and Gershon Kingsley, the cantata closely follows the ancient traditions of the Passover Seder, but gives a modern meaning to the symbolic themes represented in the old service. These themes as presented in the composition are freedom from bondage, poverty, enslavement and superstition.

The traditional Four Questions, which the youngest person at a Seder asks the eldest, are the same age-old questions asked by Jews at each yearly commemoration: why on this night is unleavened bread eaten? Why are only bitter herbs allowed? Why is the dipping of food permitted? And why must one recline while eating? Another tradition followed in the cantata is the listing of the Ten Plagues . . . those which finally brought about the freedom of the Jews.

Theodore Bikel is joined in the presentation by a chorus of six: Dennis Arlen, Fran Dorsey, Leah Horen, Barbara McKay, Richard Ryder and David White, and by an orchestra which includes an electric Moog synthesizer, an organ, guitars, drums, a bass, piano and meletron—all under the direction of composer Gershon Kingsley. "The Fifth Cup—A Cantata for Passover" was taped at Temple B'nai Or in Morristown, New Jersey. B'nai Or's Reformed Jewish Congregation is seated on three sides of the sanctuary, allowing for a theatre-in-the-round atmosphere. "The Fifth Cup—A Cantata for Passover" was produced by Sid Darion, Manager of ABC News' TV Public Affairs. It was produced in cooperation with the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. Directions is a presentation of ABC News Public Affairs.

SO NATURAL YOU'D LIKE TO THROW HIM A FISH

When the producer-director-writer-artist was a boy growing up in Southern California coastal communities, one of his favorite past-times was swimming out into the channel that was the fur seal's special thoroughfare to and from its vacation spas in Baja California. "I thought I was just having fun," Jones recalls, "but now I discover that I was doing research."

Jones is the producer-director-scripter of "The White Seal," animated special based on a story from Rudyard Kipling's The Jungle Books, which airs Monday at 8PM on CBS. It chronicles the adventures of Kotick, the extraordinary white fur seal, and his search for an island paradise where his peers can be forever safe from the ravages of the human hunter. "Seals are delightful animals," Jones says, "gentle and very playful. While we kids were swimming, they'd often surface right in front of us, rolling around in the water and barking at us in the friendliest fashion. When we barked back, they seemed to accept us as proper playmates."

When it came time to add the sound to "The White Seal" animation, there was only one person proficient enough in seal language to "speak" for the animal stars—their old swimming companion, Chuck Jones.

"It had been quite some time since I had talked seal," says the animator, "so I had to practice. That created quite a stir in the neighborhood—especially since very few seals live in the Hollywood hills." A seal bark, Jones points out, is not just a simple noise. It has its emotional refinements, just like human speech. "Seals make their sounds from deep in the throat," he explains, "and they produce a wide variety of tones, depending upon the conversation of the moment." Jones had to run through the full spectrum of seal sounds in his vocalizing for the leading "actors" in the story. (Dialogue translation of these sounds is voiced by Roddy McDowall and June Foray.) He uttered the squeaks of Kotick, the hero, as a newborn pup, the soft voice of Matkah, the mother seal, and the authoritative roar of papa Sea Catch., not to mention the chatter of their uncles and their cousins and their aunts.

Jones says he is quite confident that his efforts would merit a seal of approval from his old swimming partners. "But I still can't balance a ball on my nose," he confesses.

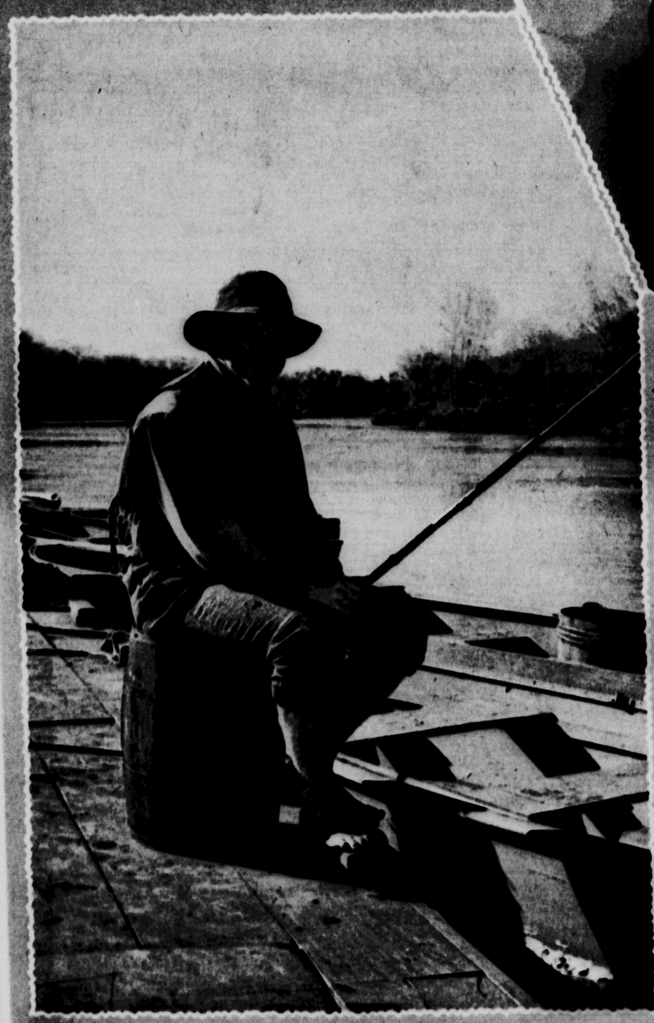
'ACTING FAMILY'

To change an old but well remembered homily: "The family that acts together stays together." This could well apply to the Howard family: Rance, Jean, Ron and Clint. Ron, of course, is the star of ABC's Happy Days, and Clint was one of The Cowboys. The Howards will be appearing together for the first time when they perform in the ABC special adaptation of "Huckleberry Finn." The program, which stars twenty-year-old Ron Howard in the title role, will be aired Tuesday at 8PM. "It's really a good feeling for all of us to be associated with the same project," said Rance, the father, who portrays Pap Finn in the production. "I know the boys are really excited about it." Rance has worked with both boys before, "Would you believe 11 years ago," but Mrs. Howard, Jean, had worked only with Ron, "and that was in summer stock back in 1956." Her role as the Widow Douglas marks her return to the screen—she quit 15 years ago when Clint was born. "This is definitely the beginning of her comeback into films," Rance remarked. "We would like to continue to do films together and maybe even a play. "In fact, we have been looking for a play we can do for the pure fun of it—and the experience."

Rance said he and Jean started in the business together but she quit to "become a housewife, mother and join the P.T.A." Ron, says Rance, got his start at the age of two. He did the Andy Griffith pilot when he was just 5. And in one of the early episodes, Clint—Arch in "Finn"—guested. "I'm really proud to see both my sons go into acting," commented the elder Howard.

'FOURTH FOR THE SEASON'

Perry Como stars in his fourth special of the season, "Perry Como's Springtime Special," on CBS, Thursday at 9PM. Perry plays host to Bob Newhart, the Pat Boone family, and Olivia Newton-John—the young English singer who has come by way of Australia into the country music field. She recently won the Entertainer of the Year Award, and shared (with Barbra Streisand) the Favorite Female Singer of 1974 Award on the recent People's Choice Awards presentation.



'HUCKLEBERRY FINN'

Ron Howard of ABC's Happy Days will star in the title role of "Huckleberry Finn," an ABC special airing Tuesday at 8PM. Jack Elam and famed country music singer Merle Haggard also star in the roles of the King and the Duke, respectively, the two con artists whose shenanigans deter Huck Finn and his black friend, Jim, from their road to freedom. Antonio Fargas, who has appeared in "Putney Swope," "The Great White Hope," "Shaft," and "Pound," stars as Jim. In a unique bit of casting, Rance Howard, Ron's real father, will portray the no-account Pap Finn, Huck's father, while Ron's mother, Jean, appears as the Widow Douglas, Huck's proper and responsible guardian. Clint Howard, Ron's younger brother, appears as Arch, the youngster who loans Huck a mule so he can rescue Jim after he is taken captive. The special television adaptation of the Mark Twain classic was filmed on the Sacramento River near the Northern California community of Marysville.

'LUCIE ARNAZ' DREAM COME TRUE'

Lucie Arnaz, multi-talented daughter of Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz, got a chance to indulge in some fantasy recently. She had the whole of Disney World to herself.

Along with Lyle Waggoner, Tommy Tune, the Rhodes Kids, Scotty Plummer and all the favorite Disney characters, Lucie takes the television audience on an hour-long fun and fantasy-filled musical tour of Florida's Walt Disney World in "Welcome to the 'World'," Sunday at 7:30PM on The Wonderful World of Disney on NBC. Filled with some 20 musical production numbers, the show culminates in the grand opening of Disney's latest attraction, Space Mountain, complete with a 2,000-musician band, fireworks and special appearances by U.S. Astronauts Scott Carpenter, Gordon Cooper and Jim Irwin.

"It was like some sort of a dream," says Lucie. "You dream of walking through Disney World after everybody's gone, but all the lights will be on and all the music going. We really got to do that," she says, somehow not believing that it really happened.

Lucie describes the week she spent at the entertainment-recreation-relaxation complex as fast. "It went by in a flash. Everyone was super helpful, including the tourists. They were having so much fun, we couldn't help but enjoy ourselves. In fact, after watching the rehearsals, they knew the words to the songs as well as we did. They sang right along with us."

Asked what her favorite moment was during the taping, Lucie takes on that child-like fantasy look again. "Going one night into Disney World, just Tommy Tune and I, dancing down Main Street, all alone." And when you think about it, there probably isn't anyone, child or not, who wouldn't like to have the same chance.

Want To Save A Buck On Your Car?

Judd Hambrick will show you how.

What kind of gas is best for your model car? Would you be better off with belted ply tires or radials over the long haul? If you're thinking of a new car, should you sell the old one or trade it in? Do auto parts have to be expensive?

All this and much more. All this week.

A 'FAMILY' VISIT

This Thursday (at 9PM on CBS) the Pat Boone Family—all six of them, will join Perry Como on the "Perry Como Springtime Special", airing on Channel 2. Joining Perry will also be Olivia Newton-John and Bob Newhart. Pat, who has been entertaining millions for many years, now proves that he does not have the exclusive on talent in the Boone Family. His wife Shirley (daughter of well-known television and recording artist Red Foley), and their four beautiful daughters, Cherry (age 20), Lindy (age 19), Debby (age 18), and Laury (age 17), joined Pat on stage when he was on tour in Japan in 1970, and have been singing with him ever since.

In the entertainment industry, where popularity is capricious and fleeting, Pat Boone is an exception. One does not have to think too hard to come up with the names of performers whose tenure as "stars" was incredibly short-lived. However, Pat Boone in his "All-American", wholesome, and almost naive way, has not only reached stardom, but has also maintained it for a period that is envied by many of today's "popular" stars.

Perhaps one reason for Pat's continued popularity, is that he is constantly delving into other areas of interest. Besides being one of the most successful recording stars, Pat is the head of his own record company, Lamb and Lion Records, and has authored eight books, the latest of which, "A Miracle A Day Keeps the Devil Away", is a collection of 31 miracles which Pat has experienced and which he hopes will enable others to experience miracles in their own lives.

Pat is now with Motown Records, and is recording on their country label, Melodyland. Cherry, Linda, Debby, and Laury are also recording for Motown. They have put out two singles—"Please Mr. Postman", and their latest, "When The Lovelight Shines", a remake of the Supremes' hit song. Shirley joins Pat and the girls on their latest family album, also on Motown.

On Thursday's show, The Pat Boone Family and Perry will sing a medley of songs by the late singer/composer Jim Croce. Pat will join Perry in a duet of "Flyin' Machine", "Up, Up, and Away", and "Breezing Along". Cherry, Lindy, Debby, and Laury will do impressions of their favorite female sister acts, such as The McGuires, The Fontaines, etc. Guest stars Olivia Newton-John and comedian Bob Newhart will join the Boone Family and Perry to sing "Walking Happy", and will close the show with "Easter Parade".

'FROM A BEAN-BAG FROG!'

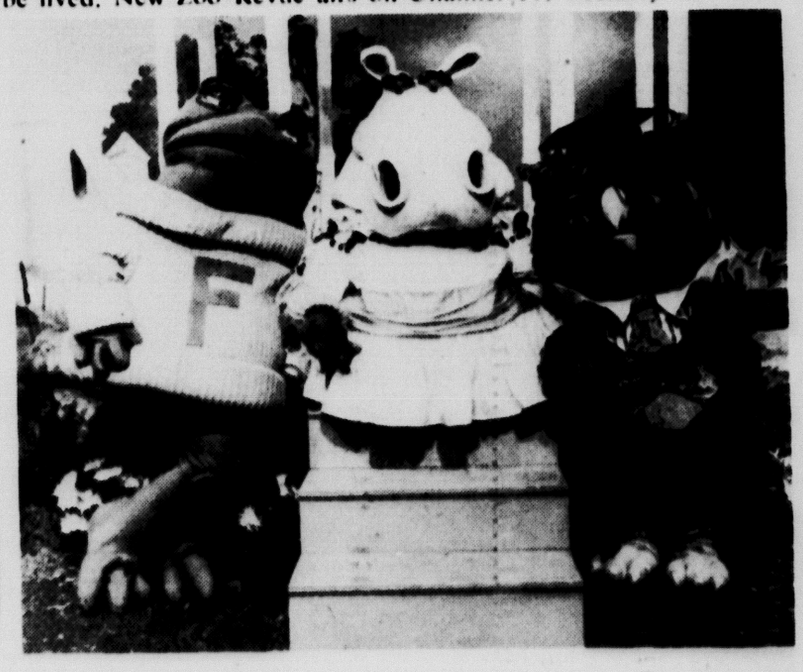
Who would ever believe that an ordinary bean bag would one day become a television star? Barbara Atlas, creator of The New Zoo Revue does, and she can prove it. She did it! Barbara, the dynamic businesswoman who, when asked to design a new character for a show on a local (Los Angeles) station, decided to create her own program against the advice of television producers who were wary of her lack of television experience. Barbara took her bean bag frog and turned him into Freddie The Frog, star of The New Zoo Revue, with the help of talented partner Doug Momary (also co-star of the show), Barbara created the two other characters: Henrietta Hippo and Charlie the Owl.

Barbara, Doug, Freddie, Henrietta, Charlie and female co-star Emmy Jo all went to their first audition, full of anticipation and excitement. "It really was a case of the blind leading the blind," grins Barbara, "as no one really knew what 'one stationary camera' meant. Barbara soon found out though when in the middle of a dance routine, Freddie went off to the left and Charlie went off to the right leaving poor Henrietta all alone in front of the camera. "Whoever said 'Ignorance is bliss,' certainly was right in my case," she says now, laughing. "If I had known what I was in for, and how much I didn't know about television, I never would have started!"

Barbara's main goal for creating the wonderful world of The New Zoo Revue was two-pronged. She wanted to create a children's show whose characters were believable, and who demonstrated life's simpler pleasures. And, yet, she insisted on including certain basic ideals to counter-balance social pressures facing children today. "We stay away from academics," explains Barbara. "There is already an excellent children's show that teaches this. New Zoo Revue teaches 'A way of life through Music' (the show's credo). "The children are taught simple things such as, the Golden Rule, to say please and thank you, etc. are presented such intangibles as Love . . . Happiness . . . Truth . . . Sharing . . . Freedom . . . Caring . . . usually difficult to explain."

When The New Zoo Revue first appeared, Barbara was quite upset at the crises America's youth were facing. "We had college kids . . . our brightest children . . . not knowing where to go. There was definitely something lacking—kids were more concerned with getting A's than with being good people. I wanted to do something about this." The themes of New Zoo Revue are not all "sweetness and light" though, recent programs have included subjects such as drugs, pollution, racial discrimination, etc. very well-received by parents and children alike.

The characters of The New Zoo Revue represent things children can relate to, and believe. Freddie the Frog, the central character, is the little boy who gets into mischief and then charms his way out of it. Henrietta Hippo is the quintessential Southern belle who is too beautiful to work, and can never make a decision on her own. Charlie the Owl, is the intellectual, who thinks he knows everything. Doug (Momary) and Emmy Joe are the parent figures who guide the three animal characters and show through music how life should be lived. New Zoo Revue airs on Channel 11, weekdays at 7AM.



RIVER HEROES—Tim Matheson and Bob Hopkins are the principal characters in a modern day adventure drama of life on a riverboat, "The Runaway Barge," Monday at 8PM on NBC.

THE HOPE DIAMOND: WHAT MYSTERIES LIE IN ITS ETERNAL CRYSTALS?

All great diamonds inspiring a passion for their possession have an aura of mystery about them, but none is considered as unlucky as the Hope Diamond. From the time this magnificent deep-blue stone was brought from India by Jean-Baptiste Tevernier, a French diamond merchant, and sold to Louis XIV, many of its owners have suffered ruined reputations, fallen fortunes or mysterious deaths. A dramatized history of this fabulous diamond, starring Samantha Eggar and Bradford Dillman, will be presented in "The Legendary Curse of the Hope Diamond," an hour-long Smithsonian special, Thursday at 10PM on CBS.

Legend has it that Tavernier stole the diamond from the eye of an idol, Ramn-Sita, and that the curse is the god's revenge. The mystery of the Hope Diamond began when it was falsely reported that Tavernier had lost his entire fortune and was devoured by wolves on the steppes of Russia.

Louis XIV had the diamond cut and gave it to his mistress, the infamous Marquise de Montespan. Later, she was accused of Satanism and was expelled from court. Within a year after Louis had bought the diamond, two of his sons died inexplicably, the king later suffered an agonizing death from smallpox.

Eventually the diamond passed on to Louis XVI and his queen, Marie-Antoinette. After both were beheaded during the Revolution, the diamond disappeared, presumably stolen by the mob.

Nothing more was heard of it until in 1830 a diamond of the same deep-blue color came on the market in London. It was bought by Henry Philip Hope, a London banker, for $90,000. A couple of generations later the family went bankrupt and the stone was sold.

It changed hands frequently in the next few years, and the curse seemed to follow it: Lorens Laduc, a star of the Folies Bergere, was stabbed to death by her lover; Simon Montharides, a Greek merchant, drove off a cliff with his entire family; Selim Habib, a Turkish sultan, was drowned off Gibraltar. Another owner was stabbed to death, still another committed suicide.

Finally, the stone was acquired by Pierre Cartier, the Parisian jeweler, who sold it for $180,000 to Mr. and Mrs. Edward McLean, a wealthy American couple who are portrayed in "The Legendary Curse of the Hope Diamond" by Samantha Eggar and Bradford Dillman. Over the years personal tragedy was to strike the McLean family again and again—accidental death, suicide, insanity.

In 1947 the diamond was bought by New York jeweler Harry Winston as part of the McLean estate. Winston donated it to the Smithsonian Institution, where it is today.

Is this diamond's legend a curse or coincidence? History pays close attention to the lives of the wealthy and famous—those who would possess diamonds. Foreshortened by time, coincidental misfortune can come to seem like a curse. Still, if it is only coincidence, there has been an abundance of it in the history of the Hope Diamond.

'MITZI AND 100 GUYS'

Leave it to Mitzi Gaynor to be inovative and creative. Who else would (1) develop the idea of a "Million Dollar Chorus" comprised of more than 30 top film and TV stars and then (2) perform in a song and dance TV special without a single comedy sketch? This is just what the glamorous and talented Mitzi has done.

First she conceived the idea of the "Million Dollar Chorus" and asked her friends if they would graciously pirouette on her special, "Mitzi and 100 Guys" which airs Monday on CBS at 9PM.

Actors Mike Connors, Edward Asner, Bob Hope, Bob Crane, William Shatner, Donald O'Connor, Telly Savalas, Dan Rowan and Peter Marshall formed the nucleous of this dream chorus, while others where possible, changed their schedules to make themselves available for this "historic" entertainment get together. These include Andy Griffith, Jim Nabors, Rich Little, Gavin MacLeod, Marty Allen, Ken Berry, Bill Bixby, Carl Betz, Tom Bosley, Clifton Davis, Chris George, Monty Hall, Ross Hunter, Dean Jones, Ted Knight, Monte Markham, Strother Martin, Greg Morris, Louis Nye, Lyle Waggoner, Tige Andrews, Jim McKrell, Bill Dana and Tom Kennedy.

The "Chorus" will perform a dance number and then be spotted throughout the entire show, while special guest stars Jack Albertson and Michael Landon will be performing in their own spots. Actually when you come to think of it, the "Mitzi and 100 Guys" special is a reflection of how Mitzi totally involves herself in all her professional activities. She is a perfectionist. Little wonder then, the Los Angeles Times describes her as "the country's number one female song and dance star," a compliment Mitzi does not take lightly or for granted. She's earned that accolade through sheer application of energy and time; for if there is one characteristic which permeates Mitzi's professional life, the trait has to be—the above mentioned perfection.

Funny, you never think of Mitzi as a professional athlete, but when you see her vigorous training program and rehearsals (athletes call it "practise") Mitzi always works at one hundred percent energy whether it is in a drab rehearsal hall or on an emblazoned stage.

To Mitzi, the phrase "good enough" is verboten. Each musical note, step or movement is drilled unremittingly, yet lovingly, into herself and her dancers. Mitzi approaches her television specials with as much originality and creativity as possible, coupled with the extravaganza feeling of a David Merrick. Mitzi is involved from the first word of her specials to the last rehearsals. She hones, changes, refines the lines, steps and music until they bear the "Gaynor" trademark.

An example of Mitzi's concern for perfection was the Academy Award Show of a few seasons ago. She was asked to sing the nominated song "Georgy Girl." The usual procedure following that type of request is to get an arranger, set the key and then sing. But not Mitzi. She conceived a whole production number in her mind, called veteran choreographer Ernie Flatt and together they created the most exciting presentation of a song in the history of the Academy.

She feels that her parents were not blessed with her, but rather that she was blessed with them, and, from them, she inherited a legacy of talent. Her mother was a dancer and father a musical director. From her birthplace in Chicago, Mitzi moved to Detroit, where she began her formal dance training when she was eight years old.

Mitzi's professional debut came at the age of thirteen as a featured dancer with Edwin Lester's Los Angeles Civic Light Opera Company in "Song Without Words." While clowning around during rehearsals for a subsequent production of "Naughty Marietta," she gave full vent to her comic compulsions and so impressed Lester with her impromptu performance that he elevated her to stardom. It was in Lester's production of "The Great Waltz" that Mitzi literally waltzed into the hearts of director Henry Koster and producer Sol Siegel, who watched from the audience. They were responsible for the start of a fairy tale career for Mitzi, as star of a succession of delightful musical comedy films produced by 20th Century Fox. She was launched as the "Golden Girl" in the film with the same name and immediately was catapulted into stardom. The foregoing simply summarizes Mitzi's dedication and energies which will be translated this Monday into what should be the bright spot of the season.

CONFUSED GERMAN STARTS RAY MILLAND'S CAREER

in movies—all because a German actor forgot which country he was in.

"I was fresh out of the army, and my only talent was shooting a rifle," recalled Milland during filming of "Ellery Queen," a two-hour World Premiere movie airing on the NBC Sunday Mystery Movie at 8:30PM. "I had been hired by the production company just to do some trick shooting in the film. "Then the leading man, a German actor, forgot that he was in England. While crossing a street he looked left to be sure there were no cars coming, and stepped into the street—where he was promptly struck by a car coming from the right." When the actor suffered a broken leg in the accident the part was offered to Milland, who says he learned his craft by doing it.

But even the most seasoned actor can behave like a rank amateur on off nights, says Milland, who recalls "a night of horror" several years ago. "It was in Ohio. I was in a play called 'Critic's Choice,' a play I had been doing for nearly two years. As the curtain opened I was seated at a breakfast table with my wife and son when I suddenly realized that I couldn't recall my son's name."

From that point on his mind went blank and he couldn't remember a single line of the play. "Luckily the others in the cast saw what had happened to me, and they took action, taking my lines as their own, and sending them back to me so all I had to do was answer yes or no. "It was dreadful—and after the play I couldn't even remember where I had parked my car!"
